Britain Will Ask France to Assist In Curbing Italy

Cabinet Holds Support Needed to Solve Row in Africa.

Veer From Berlin To Paris Probable

Copyright, 1935, by the United Press.

London, July 3.—The British cabinet today decided to seek French support to restrain Italy in the crisis with Abyssinia.

The decision was expected to mean that British policy would veer from Germany, which for some time has enjoyed London's support.

It was learned that the British government decided to take the position that proposed pressure on Italy by the League of Nations could be enforced only with French cooperation.

That would involve a British shying away from the Germans and the fraternization engendered by the recent Anglo-German naval accord would cool.

While evolving no new solution of the dispute between Italy and Ethiopia, the cabinet is said to have discussed fully the approach needed to induce France to desist from further alleged encouragement of the Italian venture in East Africa.

Parleys Believed Due.

Authoritative sources said a lively sequence of Anglo-French conversations now would be conducted with Great Britain supporting French efforts to conclude non-aggression pacts in eastern Europe.

Simultaneously the final draft of a western European air pact is expected to be completed rapidly.

Moreover, Great Britain, instead of leaving France to face Germany alone in attempts to limit German land armaments, will collaborate with the Paris government.

Finally, the London government was represented as determined to dispel remaining French uneasiness lest London negotiate bilateral agreements, other than naval, with Germany.

The cabinet, meeting for the first time since the return from Rome of Capt. R. Anthony Eden, secretary for League of Nations affairs, discussed sending a note to Paris to learn the French attitude toward the role the league should play in the conflict.

Breach on Italian Move.

France has pursued a policy widely regarded as favorable to Italy's bid for overlordship in Abyssinia—tending to increase the Franco-British estrangement arising from the Anglo-German naval agreement and aggravated when Britain failed to communicate to France British proposals to mediate between Italy and Abyssinia until after the offer had been submitted to and rejected by Premier Benito Mussolini.

With a view to weaning France from support of Italy against Abyssinia, it was understood the cabinet decided to yield to the French plea to reaffirm interdependence in pending major diplomatic projects in Europe such as an air aid pact, eastern European security, land

Canada to Mexico Air Record Broken

Earl Ortman Clips Hour 3 Mins. From Old Time.

By the United Press.

Agua Caliente, Mexico, July 3.—A thunderbolt concealed under the cowling of a blunt-nosed Kieth Rider monoplane hurled tow-headed Earl Ortman down the Pacific Coast from Victoria, British Columbia, today at a pace that shattered all existing Canada-Mexico speed records.

The 23-year-old Oklahoman gunned his small "bullet-plane" over the 1,250-mile route in 5 hours, 27 minutes—1 hour, 3 minutes faster than the heretofore fastest time attained between the two international border points.

Allowing for a single refueling stop, his actual flying time was 5 hours, 10 minutes.

Fight to Regain Gloria Is Lost By Her Mother

Court Holds Motive of Mrs. Vanderbilt to Be Mercenary.

By the Associated Press.

New York, July 3.—Bluntly ascribing mercenary motives to Mrs. Gloria Morgan Vanderbilt's fight for custody of her heiress-daughter, the appellate division of the Supreme Court today denied the dashing widow of Reginald Vanderbilt full claims of motherhood upon 11-year-old Gloria Morgan Vanderbilt.

In an unanimous decision of the appellate judges, the court upheld the decision of Supreme Court Justice John F. Carew awarding principal custody of the child to Mrs. Harry Payne Whitney, her paternal aunt.

"The reason which the relator (Mrs. Vanderbilt) offered in explanation of her conduct seems to us entirely unconvincing and inadequate," said the opinion written by Associate Justice Irwin Untermyer.

"Not until the allowance, which was provided for the child's support, appeared to be endangered by the fact that the child no longer lived with her does the relator appear to have manifested any strong desire for her daughter's companionship."

Noting judicially that Mrs. Vanderbilt had relegated her daughter to a "life of neglect and loneliness," at which the little heiress protested bitterly, the opinion said that Justice Carew "adopted what appears to us the only possible course."

The appellate judges then dropped a word of advice to Mrs. Vanderbilt:

"In the meantime, if the relator shall avail herself fully or her

Eccles Gives Indorsement To Bank Bill

Fundamentally Like the Measure He Proposed, Governor Declares.

Improvements to Be Sought at Senate, House Conference.

By Franklyn Waltman, Jr.

Although dissatisfied with many of the details of the Glass sub-committee draft of the banking bill, Gov. Marriner S. Eccles of the Federal Reserve Board yesterday indorsed that measure as recognizing the "fundamental principles and purposes" of the bill originally proposed by him.

He asserted that the bill approved by the Senate Banking and Currency Committee "in its most vital respects is a distinct advance in the direction of centralized responsibility and authority for the exercise of monetary powers." He added that the bill's provisions represented "a long step in the direction of intelligent management of our monetary system."

In the first statement to come from him since the Glass sub-committee completely revised his banking bill, Gov. Eccles contended that the measure in a less fundamental respect "could and should be improved upon in the interest of practical administration and greater efficiency." He said, however, he had "every reason to believe" that between the House and Senate versions of the bill "a reasonably satisfactory measure will be worked out."

Conference Changes.

It was indicated, as pointed out in The Post yesterday, that the Administration had become reconciled to the Senate's revised bill as the best that can be obtained from Congress at this time and that no effort will be made to change the measure substantially when it reaches the Senate floor, probably next Wednesday. Instead, the Administration will seek improvements in the measure, from its viewpoint, in the conference between House and Senate.

The Senate committee's report supporting the revised bill will be available tomorrow. This will be drafted by Senator Carter Glass (Democrat), of Virginia, chairman of the sub-committee which rewrote the Eccles bill. It was hoped on Tuesday to get the bank bill before the Senate next Monday, but this plan has been abandoned in order to permit Senator Glass to visit his home over the week-end. He will be back by Wednesday.

See Serious Defects.

Although Gov. Eccles indorses the revised bill in principle, Reserve Board attaches have been more or less severe in their criticism of virtually every major feature in the new measure. While they concede it represents an improvement over existing law, they think there are many defects in the Glass draft—some of them serious.

Gov. Eccles, however, feels that he is enough of a realist to know that in legislation it must be a case of give and take and that no major law is ever written completely satisfactory to anyone. But he feels that progress is being made toward his objective of centralizing authority in the Reserve Board over credit and monetary policies.

Incidentally, in the last few days the Reserve Board has tightened its control over the Nation's currency system as a result of the Treasury's retirement of $675,000,000 outstanding Consols, which represent backing for national bank notes. Withdrawal from circulatoin of all national bank notes is now proceeding rapidly. As fast as they reach Reserve banks they are automatically retired.

Simplified Currency.

Within a few weeks only a small part of the $650,000,000 of national bank notes outstanding two months ago will remain in circulation. By August 1 national bank notes definitely will be eliminated by the Treasury's action in retiring the bonds which must be deposited as security for them. The result will be a simplification and uniformity of the country's currency system,

Detroit Child Slayer Seized Accidentally by N. Y. Police

By the United Press.

New York, July 3.—Merton Ward Goodrich, sought for almost a year for the slaying of 11-year-old Lillian Gallaher, of Detroit, confessed to the murder late today after his accidental arrest on charges of disorderly conduct.

"I guess you know all about me," muttered the prisoner, twice an inmate of insane asylums, as he recounted the brutal killing. Goodrich was a jazz band trap drummer.

He was seized first as "Raymond Johnson" as he watched children wading yesterday in a Central Park swimming pool. He was on the verge of making overtures to some of them when he was arrested by a patrolman who became suspicious of his actions.

His true identity was revealed by police fingerprint records.

"I was just scared," mumbled Goodrich. "I didn't mean to kill her.

"We went to my room and I took her to the bedroom. She screamed and tried to run away. She ran into another room and slipped on a rug. She hit her head, knocking her unconscious. I feared the worst because I had committed a similar crime some years ago." It was for this attack that Goodrich was committed to an asylum.

The slender, thin-faced Goodrich and his wife both were booked tonight on charges of homicide. They waived extradition to Detroit.

Lillian Gallaher, disappeared last September 20 while selling tickets for a school raffle. Her violated body was found a week later in a trunk in an apartment hastily vacated by Goodrich and his wife.

Blue Eagle Not Dead—'Just in Cold Storage'

By the Associated Press.

The NRA says the Blue Eagle is not dead, but is in "cold storage."

The explanation is that of James L. O'Neill, acting chief of the recovery ageney. For weeks NRA has made little or no use of the eagle for compliance purposes, but officials don't want to announce an official death sentence yet.

Some kind of an insigna might be developed in the future as a badge of merit for industries living up to certain labor standards. Then they might pull the bird out of storage.

Heart Ailment Causes Death Of Justice Hitz

Popular Jurist Stricken on Leaving Home for Court; Named in 1916.

Associate Justice William Hitz, of the United States Court of Appeals for the District, died yesterday of a heart attack which seized him as he was leaving his home for the courthouse. He was 63.

It was Justice Hitz, who because he hated delay, ruled promptly on dilatory motions in his court with this now famous remark:

"This court is frequently in error but never in doubt."

But the frequency of the court's error was exaggerated, because his decisions were not often reversed in the high tribunals.

Celebrated for his curt, ironic humor while on the bench of the District Supreme Court, Justice Hitz was no less admired and loved for his mercy and understanding compassion.

Court Adjourned.

Efficient and indefatigable, he had refused to leave his work for a much needed rest, although he had been in poor health for a year.

When news of his death came, Chief Justice George E. Martin, of the Court of Appeals, canceled its scheduled session, while District Supreme Court was adjourned until Monday.

Justice Hitz was appointed to the bench of the District Supreme Court in 1916 by President Wilson. Although a Democrat, he was advanced to the Court of Appeals in 1931 by President Hoover.

Unconventional and informal when he presided in the lower court, Justice Hitz expressed his views bluntly and independently of those of his associates.

The tradition of well-said things which he leaves behind perhaps might be compared to the sage and celebrated remarks of the late Justice Oliver Wendell Holmes. Here is an example:

Held Court in Open.

A jury was just filing out to start deliberations. Up rushed a young prosecutor to Justice Hitz. "Your honor," he said, "I forgot to ask the court to instruct the jury that the fact that the defendant in this case had a preponderance of witnesses is not to be considered a preponderance of the evidence."

Justice Hitz turned to the jurors and said: "Gentlemen of the jury, this is a law suit, not an election."

That his informality was not entirely in expression was proven by his frequently holding court on the courthouse lawn during hot weather. It was cool under the trees, and jury, lawyers and litigants as well as the judge appreciated it.

Away from the bench, Justice

NRA Passes; Staff to Pen An Obituary

1,400 Workers to Write Complete History of Blue Eagle.

4,000 Will Lose Jobs as FTC Takes Charge of Voluntary Codes.

NRA, until six weeks ago the most elaborate and most active of all New Deal emergency organizations, quietly expired yesterday without even the formality of a death notice. Its publicity department, which during the last two years has turned out more statements and announcements than ever were issued by any Government agency in a similar length of time, ignored the event.

First definite word that the end finally had come was given by President Roosevelt who made it clear at his press conference that all matters pertaining to voluntary business agreements to replace codes will be handled by the Federal Trade Commission. James L. O'Neill, recently appointed acting NRA administrator, said later that his organization hereafter will do little besides compiling a history of the two years of life of the Blue Eagle and gather information.

4,000 to Lose Jobs.

Four thousand of the 5,400 NRA employes will be transferred to other departments or discharged within two months. The remaining 1,400 will stay for a while to compile records.

Efforts at artificial resuscitation had been going on ever since the Supreme Court decision outlawing the codes. They have now been abandoned. A skeleton setup, with various divisions and an advisory board, was ordered by the President with enactment of the new NRA law. With the exception of an "archives division" headed by Leon C. Marshall, these are now inoperative. While several proposed bills for NRA revival are being considered, there is virtually no chance that any legislation will be enacted at this session, of Congress.

"Spade Work" to Be Done.

There has been almost constant discussion of possibility of handling voluntary codes through the skeleton NRA, but this has been abandoned, largely because the Federal Trade Commission has far more authority in law to handle agreements than has the NRA.

Asked about the remaining functions of the NRA, President Roosevelt said that it will do some spade work.

"Spades can be used to dig graves," O'Neill said when told of the President's statement.

Until the more recent discussions between NRA and FTC officials, it was considered possible that NRA would handle wage and hour provisions of codes, but this proposal has been given up. Such wage and hour provisions as will be contained in the new agreements—and there are expected to be very few such provisions—will be handled by the FTC.

O'Neill announced that Maj. Gen. Amos A. Fries, recently appointed to head a committee to study the effect of the abandonment of codes, will not be able to serve. He said no one had been named to replace him as head of the committee. Alvin W. Brown, who was brought to NRA by Gen. Hugh S. Johnson and who recently has been assisting O'Neill, has left the organization to assist Gen. Johnson as New York City works progress administrator.

100,000 to Watch Fireworks In Monument Area Tonight

Fair, Warm Weather Forecast for Parades and Speeches on Fourth; President Plans to Spend Day Working in His Study.

By Gerald G. Gross.

Promised "fair and warmer" by the weather man, Washingtonians and the thousands of out-of-towners who make the occasion an excuse to visit the Capital will celebrate the "Fourth" today with fireworks, speeches, athletics, picnics and practically every other type of summer diversion.

Throngs of tourists and sightseers will descend upon the city, whose attractions will include a fireworks display, marathon race and numerous patriotic exercises, and throngs of local residents will take advantage of the holiday by invading nearby beach resorts and mountain retreats. More than 100,000 are expected to witness the Monument Grounds ceremonies beginning at 7:15 p. m., whose crowning feature will be a $750 pyrotechnic display.

President Roosevelt will observe the 159th anniversary of the signing of the Declaration of Independence by staying in the White House and working, he indicated yesterday, adding that the highways probably would be too crowded for an enjoyable drive.

He may, though, if he wishes, watch the fireworks show in the Monument Grounds simply by taking a chair on the south portico. Whether or not, he will be represented on the grounds by a brilliant set-piece likeness of himself. The only other portrait in the fireworks display will be one of George Washington.

The first official event of the day will be a street parade in Takoma Park, beginning at 9:30 a. m., which will be led by the United States Army Band. The march will inaugurate the community's all day celebration, which will be concluded with a fireworks exhibition at 8 p. m. in the new Philadelphia avenue playground.

Col. Francis Scott Key-Smith, descendant of the composer of "The Star-Spangled Banner," will address the Association of Oldest Inhabitants at their annual celebration. The old Union Engine House at Nineteenth and H streets northwest will be the scene of the program, which is scheduled to begin at 10:30 a. m.

From 11 a. m. until noon the Jewish War Veterans will conduct patriotic services in the amphitheater of Arlington National Cemetery. Senator Bennett Champ Clark, of Missouri, will deliver the principal

D. C. Bars Emerge From Hiding; Even Mixing at Tables Legal

Washingtonians saw drinks mixed in the open legally for the first time last night since enactment of the Sheppard prohibition act, as the "hidden bar" bill became a law.

Bars began emerging from behind screens and partitions, where they had been since passage of the District liquor bill, early in the afternoon after President Roosevelt had signed the bill permitting on-sale liquor dealers to mix drinks in front of patrons.

George Offutt, chairman of the Alcoholic Beverage Control Board, immediately issued regulations governing operation of the act and warned dealers and consumers that the law does not permit patrons to drink while standing.

"Patrons can not be served unless they are sitting at tables as at present," he said.

He explained, however, that bartenders may even mix and pour drinks at the tables under provision of the Dirksen act.

While Offutt said the ABC board would enforce the act and predicted there would be no return to the pre-prohibition saloon, Commissioner Gerge E. Allen, who opposed the bill, said he saw no reason why the regulation requiring patrons to sit down while drinking might not also be repealed.

"If you are going half way, why not go the rest," he said. "The sitting requirement is no sillier than the hidden bar."

Charles E. Sands, legislative agent of the Hotel Restaurant Employes and Bartenders Alliance, issued a warning that if dealers did not generally abolish hidden bars the employes' union would take steps to force them to do so.

Lobbyists Facing Call By House as Utility Bill Nears Test in Senate

Peace Treaty Ends Dispute Over Relief

By Felix Bruner.

Heads of the three principal divisions of the works program signed a "peace treaty" yesterday, as every indication pointed to an actual start of the program with employment of hundreds of thousands of workers before the end of July.

The "treaty," designed to settle the question of authority between Harry L. Hopkins, works progress administrator, and Secretary Ickes, PWA administrator, was made public by President Roosevelt. It was signed by Hopkins, Ickes and Frank C. Walker, executive director of the National Emergency Council, and approved by President Roosevelt.

While the agreement, which was designated a clarifying statement, gives Ickes a slightly more important place in the program, it definitely keeps Hopkins in the position of head man. There was nothing in the agreement defining Walker's duties, most of which have been eliminated since the program turned to a setup resembling the old CWA.

Pact's Provisions.

The agreement provides:

New construction to cost more than $25,000 will be under the jurisdiction of the PWA.

Slum clearance and housing shall be under PWA.

"White collar" projects, building projects costing less than $25,000, and all projects, regardless of cost, except new building and housing, shall be under the Works Progress Administration.

Giving Hopkins the final word, the arrangement provides that all projects rejected by the PWA shall be sent to Hopkins for final consideration.

As examples of the kind of projects to be handled through the PWA, the statement listed a score of different types of buildings, in addition to sewer systems, drainage improvements, terminals, water supply systems and other types of public works.

Varied Program.

The Hopkins organization will handle such projects, in addition to "white collar" jobs, as recreational facilities, parks, playgrounds, small dams, ditches, street repairs, demolition, malaria control, pest extermination, airports, sidewalks, gutters and curbs, levee work, landscaping, grading, farm-to-market roads, and reservoirs.

Many times as much money will be spent on the projects under the direction of Hopkins as those under the direction of Ickes. Complications arose almost immediately after the statement was issued. Lump allotments made Monday for works progress projects in Indiana, Alabama, Georgia, New York City and the District of Columbia include a number of items of construction to cost more than $25,000. Hopkins said that many of these could be broken down into smaller units to come within the price limit, and others constituted additions to existing buildings, which he said would come under his department. He said, however, that in a few instances there might be conflict with the new rule.

The new arrangement, it was pointed out at the White House, does not govern applications falling within the jurisdiction of any other Federal agency. These applications will continue to be handled directly through the division of applications and information.

Hill Stresses Social Aspect Of Wealth Tax

House Expert Doubtful of Much Revenue From New Program.

By the Associated Press.

Indications that the President's tax-the-rich program would bring in less money than has been forecast yesterday came from a congressional tax leader, coupled with an assertion that the "social aspects" of the plan were more important than its revenue considerations.

Representative Samuel B. Hill (Democrat), of Washington, chairman of the House Ways and Means sub-committee which originates tax bills, the spokesman, also discounted attempts to delay action on the program until next session. He added that "we're going through with the original plan."

The original plan was an understanding with the President that all efforts would be made to enact the new tax program this session, Chairman Harrison (Democrat), of Mississippi, of the Senate Finance Committee, already had said he was proceeding with that program.

Hill remarked yesterday that "we will have some sort of a bill ready for the full committee to start hearings on Monday."

Just what rates would be included, Hill could not say. He asserted, however, that after conferences with Treasury representatives he felt the "social aspects of the taxes are more important than the amount of money that will be raised."

Some, he remarked, have said that millions and even billions could be raised through the very Rules Committee Moves to Investigate Undue Influence Charges.

Fight Due Monday On 'Death Penalty'

Higher Chamber Defers Actio nfor $150,000 for 2-Way Inquiry.

By Robert C. Albright.

Congress went hunting for lobbyists yesterday with a gun and a cannon, and the noise from both all but drowned out a quiet but determined struggle to restore the "death sentence" for "unnecessary" holding companies to the Wheeler-Rayburn bill.

The cannon was wheeled into place by the Senate Interstate Commerce Committee. It demanded an $150,000 Senate investigation of all efforts to influence votes on the Administration's pending power legislation. The Senate deferred action.

The smaller weapon, lacking powers of subpena and appropriations carried in the bolder Senate resolution, was wielded by the House Rules Committee. Lobbyists for and against the Administration on the Wheeler-Rayburn measure will be called before the group next week.

Power Measures Ahead.

Both houses, meanwhile, coasted toward another vote on power measures that will place the Administration's weakened grip on Congress again under test.

Senate conservatives on Monday will attempt to override the President's holding company "death sentence" demands by a motion to concur in the riddled House measure.

At about the same time the House will call up the Administration's TVA amendments, minus most of the broad powers sought by the President. The leadership will make a last stand to restore them to approximately their original form, and insert the new teeth the Administration wants to carry out its power policies.

These two measures for the moment overshadowed other pending bills equally charged with explosives for the Administration's leadership. Drastic AAA amendments, sweeping changes in the banking law and proposed tax legislation head the list of troublemakers.

Lobbying in Spotlight.

Lobbying legislation, smoldering subsurface all session, thrust all of these into the temporary background. Despite a House investigation already ordered into influences brought to bear both ways on Wheeler-Rayburn votes, the Senate yesterday prepared to proceed in its own way.

The Black resolution, calling for an all-embracing utility lobby investigation, was reported by the Senate Interstate Commerce Committee with a recommendation for a $150,000 appropriation. The Senate referred this to their Committee on Audit and Control.

"It is intended to apply to any efforts which have been made to influence legislation relating to the so-called holding company bill wherever they have been made," announced Senator Hugo Black

De Chambrun Slated As French Envoy Here

Paris, July 3 (U.P.).—Charles de Chambrun, French Ambassador to Italy and uncle of Count Rene de Chambrun, who is engaged to marry Premier Pierre Laval's daughter, Josee, will be named Ambassador to Washington, it was rumored in diplomatic circles today.

The rumors intrigued Paris society, since they follow so closely announcement that Count Chambrun, descendant of Lafayette, is to become a member of the premier's family in August. Ambassador Chambrun served as counsellor in Washington in 1919. He was a secretary in the French Embassy there in 1903.

85 Processing Suits on File Against AAA

List of 56 Is Bared After Amendments to Act Are Reported to Senate.

By the Associated Press.

Shortly after the Senate Agriculture Committee reported to the Senate the proposed AAA amendments containing a barrier to tax recovery suits yesterday, the Department of Justice released an incomplete list of 56 processing tax cases pending in Federal courts.

Meanwhile, at a press conference with Secretary Wallace, officials said that a total of 85 suits had been filed. It was reported that temporary restraining orders had been granted in about 15 cases.

Suits Fail to Make Dent.

Wallace told newsmen that he could not understand why the scores of suits have been filed in recent weeks, but said the litigation had not "made a dent" in the tax collections.

He said that in several cases where temporary restraining orders have been granted, the courts have required the plaintiff processors to deposit an amount equal to the taxes due, plus penalties and interest. In such cases, it was said, the processors must deposit also taxes which might become due and payable while the suits are pending.

The proposed AAA amendments as reported by the Senate committee would place a stamp of approval on all taxes collected in the past.

Precautionary Measure.

Chester C. Davis, AAA administrator, advanced the belief that the suits were filed as precautionary measures. He believed that when the first suits were instituted, processors, or directors and stockholders of firms read accounts of the proceedings and decided to take no chances.

Agriculture Department officials said that benefit payments to farmers in adjustment programs in effect this year will be made regardless of the outcome of the processing tax suits. If the suits should result in a sharp decline in tax collections, benefit payments would be taken from general Treasury funds, officials said.

AAA officials estimated that the 85 pending suits asked recovery of about $10,000,000. Approximately $900,000,000 in processing taxes has been collected.

Missouri Pacific Plan Before RFC

Bondholders Offer to Unite Many Security Issues.

By the Associated Press.

A plan for the reorganization of the capitalization of the Missouri Pacific Railroad yesterday was placed before Chairman Jones of the RFC by representatives of the bondholders of the road.

Presented by J. W. Steadman, of the Prudential Life Insurance Co., the plan calls for consolidation of between 80 and 100 underlying bond issues of the system into five or six issues.

The present bondholders would receive one-third of their holdings in fixed interest bonds, one-third in income bands and one-third in stock.

Jones said he saw only minor differences between the bondholders' plan and that worked out by O. P. Van Sweringen, who, with his brother, controls the system. Jones plans a meeting for some time next week in New York between Van Sweringen and the bondholders' committee to work out final details of a plan to be placed before the St. Louis Federal Court and the Interstate Commerce Commission.

McNinch Will Attend World Power Parley

By the Associated Press.

President Roosevelt yesterday designated Frank R. McNinch, chairman of the Power Commission, as his special representative to the world power conference at The Hague, beginning July 15.

The conference was created in 1923 for the purpose of international discussion and study of technical, economic and social problems connected with power development.

McNinch will carry with him an invitation for the third plenary meeting of the world power conference to be held in the United States next year under the auspices of the Federal Government.

Senate Passes Bill For Statistical Board

By the Associated Press.

A House bill providing for the creation of a central statistical board and a statistical committee composed of Cabinet officers was passed yesterday by the Senate and sent to the White House.

The board would coordinate and improve the statistical work of the various Governmental agencies.

The committee would be composed of the Secretaries of Commerce, Agriculture and Labor. The board would be headed by a presidential appointee who would receive $10,000 a year. An appropriation of $180,000 annually would be authorized.

Between You and Me

An All-Around Independence Day; AAA Processing Taxes; Moley's Fall From Grace.

By Raymond Clapper

DECLARATIONS of Independence are becoming popular again. The Supreme Court declared its independence in the NRA case. The House declared its independence in the utilities vote, or did it? Processers are rebelling against the processing tax like colonists at the Boston tea party. Republicans are beginning to declare their independance in audible voices again. Confusing, perhaps, and certainly noisy, but worth it if it is a sign of independent thought.

The United States has had the advantage of being able to develop its own institutions. Unlike old and rigid European societies, it has been cramped little by the dead hand of the past. Not being cursed with ignorance or oppression, Americans have put out no welcome mat for dictatorship. This Government has remained flexible on the whole, and therefore has been able to grow with changing times.

The chief danger now comes not from those who stand up and protest against AAA, or devaluation or any of the things that have been done, but from those who would freeze the Constitution and the forms of Government against any change. Nothing very serious can happen to a government that has the power of adaptation. After all, Congress meets every year and Presidents can not stay longer than four years unless the country is satisfied with them. Unlike Germany, Russia or Italy, we have the power of relatively quick correction. With that power the United States can be bolder in trying out what it thinks is worth trying. Throughout history the governments which broke down were the ones which could not bend.

Filing of the vast number of suits to hold up collection of AAA processing taxes is another argument for expanding the principle of declaratory judgments so that a final court test on the constitutionality of an important law may be had before untold damage results. Here it is more than two years after AAA began to function and some months more must elapse before the Supreme Court can say whether AAA's collection of processing taxes was constitutional. In the first two years $824,000,000 has been collected in processing taxes. Now nobody knows whether it was all a mistake or not.

Raymond Moley is supposed to have dropped slightly in presidential favor recently because he did not see eye to eye with Mr. Roosevelt on the graduated corporation tax proposal and liked the House version of the utility bill better than the Senate's "death sentence."

The reason NRA's job has been shifted to the Federal Trade Commission is that under the existing Federal Trade Commission act there is more authority than the court left in NIRA. The commission has practically every power which was left to NRA and a good deal more.

The one big ticklish problem is that the antitrust laws stand and when the Federal Trade Commission puts its okay on any industrial agreement, it becomes morally, though not legally, bound to refrain from prosecution. This scheme will require close dovetailing of the commission with the Department of Justice, so that the Government is not simultaneously approving through one branch and threatening prosecution through the other.

Gov. Talmadge's anti-Roosevelt Fourth of July speech in Georgia had some of its edge taken off because Mr. Roosevelt spent half an hour at his press conference yesterday reciting a list of 881 works projects to be undertaken in Georgia.

Mr. Roosevelt began reading the list with the explanation that he would stop if anyone became tired of it.

After he read half a dozen items, a voice from the rear boomed out:

"Tired."

Mr. Roosevelt continued to read, and shortly the same voice was heard again:

"Still tired."

But the President continued and after a while the interlocutor called out:

"Exhausted."

"It's a filibuster."

They thought the President was trying to stall off any questions about the utility legislation. But they finally got their questions in. The first one, the President said, was a silly question. In response to the second one, he quoted the last lines of the old Southey poem about the Battle of Blenheim when the old man was asked what good came of it:

"Why, that I can not tell," said he.
"But 'twas a famous victory."

The much-advertised Republican rally to be held at Cleveland July 8, with representatives of surrounding States attending, was called without benefit of clergy. Regular leaders were not in on it. The promoters are in a row with their own Ohio State chairman. Even Representative Chester Bolton, of Cleveland, chairman of the Republican congressional campaign committee, was not consulted. Later he was invited to speak, but business here will prevent him from attending.

The meeting was organized by George H. Bender, former State senator, who is at outs with the regular State organization. Other Republican leaders can't repudiate the affair, so they're giving it the silent treatment.

Plans for a Fourth of July Roosevelt rally at Warm Springs, Ga., to offset Gov. Talmadge's Independence Day speech have been called off. The President doesn't want his Warm Springs Foundation mixed up in politics . . . If the Republicans by any chance put a Democrat on their ticket it is likely to be Lew Douglas for Vice President . . . Whether an Administration agent threatened to cut off funds for the Passamaquoddy tide - harnessing project if Representative Brewster, of Maine, voted—as he did—against the death sentence, is a matter of dispute. But such dust has been kicked up over it that the Administration couldn't stop this project now if it desired to, without looking very guilty.

Island Inquiry ToldOustedAid Is Unbalanced

Former U. S. Attorney Denies He Spent Time Damning Pearson.

By the Associated Press.

Senators whose investigation of Gov. Paul M. Pearson's Virgin Islands administration received a fist-fight send-off yesterday heard an anti-Pearson witness termed "not normal mentally."

Charles H. Gibson, ousted Government attorney in the islands, denied this description from the witness stand. He just as emphatically denied that he had "excited the (Virgin Islands) natives by circulating a rumor that the Governor was leaving the islands in 30 days."

The testimony about Gibson's mentality was read by Edward J. Colgan, the Senate committee's counsel, from a report by two Interior Department investigators. They alleged Gibson was "afflicted with a monomania concerning Pearson and spends most of his time walking the streets damning the Governor."

Reynolds Asks Questions.

Senator Reynolds (Democrat), of North Carolina, who went to the islands in May to open the investigation and returned home "disgusted," questioned Gibson.

"Why were you not removed directly when Pearson came in?" he asked.

"In the Hoover Administration it wasn't so easy to remove a Republican," was the reply.

Gibson said a change of administration in the islands was "desirable for economic reasons and to preserve peace and quiet." The populace, he contended, had no confidence in Pearson and felt that his background as an educator and lecturer did not fit him for the job.

Grinning and handsome Lawrence W. Cramer, Lieutenant Governor of the islands, denied he intended to start a nudist colony there.

Committee counsel had asked Gibson, former island attorney, if Cramer "is the one who was in favor of establishing a nudist colony there."

Smiling broadly, Gibson said: "I can not say."

Explains to Reporters.

But Cramer, in the audience, laughingly told reporters there was "nothing to it." He explained:

"One of the charges brought was that I intended to start a nudist colony on Christianstad Island. In the first place I haven't the figure. In the second place I would never start it there. It is in the middle of the harbor. It would stop all traffic."

Earnest Gruening, director of the division of territories and island possessions of the Department of the Interior, later issued a statement attacking Gibson as having been "long a trouble-maker in the Virgin Islands."

Gibson, he said, was "discharged as Government attorney on September 12, 1933, because of incompetence and neglect of his official duties," adding that John H. Edwards, Assistant Secretary of the Interior in 1932, had "reported that 21 requests for legal aid made to Gibson in the spring of 1932 had gone unanswered."

The hearing was adjourned until Monday.

Farmer Facing Charge Of Murdering Nurse

Minneapolis, July 3 (AP).—County Attorney Ed. J. Goff today said he was preparing first-degree murder charges against Joseph Ponczek, 51, who, Deputy Sheriff Fred Kramer said, had confessed to slaying Mrs. Clara Williams, 63, a nurse.

The deputies found Mrs. Williams' body buried on Ponczek's farm near Anoka in an 8-foot grave underneath that of a dog. Kramer said Ponczek had confessed bringing Miss Williams to his farm as a housekeeper, last May 9, attacking her and beating her to death when she resisted.

Mrs. Williams was a daughter of the late Rev. P. M. Cross, Methodist minister at Mitchell, S. Dak.

Works Dispute Ended by Pact; Plans Speeded

conference, read a long list of projects approved in the States that already have been given lump-sum allotments to dispute charges that the works program is "just another CWA." As examples he cited school buildings, libraries, playgrounds, college buildings, golf courses, and numerous other projects to be constructed under supervision of Hopkins' department. Cost of many of the projects he enumerated far exceeded the $25,000 limitation on building construction under the Hopkins organization.

The President pointed out that a number of projects, including some rivers and harbors work, construction of power and reclamation dams and similar undertakings would not be charged wholly against State quotas because they are national projects. He announced also that he had decided to increase expenditures for farm-to-market roads from 25 per cent to 37½ per cent of the $400,000,000 highway allotment. These unpaved roads will be improved with a minimum of material cost under the works Progress Administration.

Hopkins announced that allotments to States probably will all be made before August 1. He indicated that such lump-sum allotments as already have been made do not represent the total to be given States and cities receiving them. This would indicate that probably half the $4,000,000,000 works fund will be spent on thousands of small jobs lumped as State programs.

Asked what part the Walker organization would play in handling these projects, Hopkins said that State programs as such would pass through the DAI, but that each project would not be considered separately.

Hopkins said that half of the projects being carried out by the FERA as work relief will be transferred to the new program.

This probably will mean that more than 1,000,000 persons will be almost immediately listed as working under the new program, although they will merely be continuing on their old relief jobs. Many small State projects also are expected to get under way this month, so that by the end of the month there will be an impressive total employed.

In each instance in which States have been given allotments the States themselves have contributed substantially toward the cost, it was revealed.

Most of the heavy cost allotments already have been made.

Farley Changes Mind, Approves 40-Hour Week

Postal Chief Now Indorses Bill to Cut Hours of His Employes.

Reversing his famous stand, Postmaster General Farley last night announced his indorsement of a House bill providing a 40-hour week for all employes of the Postal Service. The bill passed the House June 3 and is in Senate committee.

Between 18,000 and 20,000 substitute workers, all on the present rolls, will be given full-time employment if the measure is enacted, at an added cost of $21,400,000 yearly, according to figures compiled at the Postoffice Department. Postal employes now work 44 hours weekly.

Farley's indorsement of the resolution was announced in a letter to Senator Kenneth McKellar, chairman of the Senate Committee on Postoffices and Post Roads.

In it he wrote:

"I have given much thought to this legislation and I feel I should say to you that at the time this matter was presented to the Department by Hon. James M. Mead, chairman of the committee on Postoffices and Post Roads in the House of Representatives, in April, 1935, it was felt that the increase in revenus in the Postal Service had not reached such proportions as to justify an expenditure sufficient to take care of legislation of this character. However, I am pleased to advise you that at this time there is every indication that the increase in postal revenues will continue, and it is believed that better working conditions for the employes can be provided.

"I have talked with the President, and he believes that in view of the increase in receipts and the general objective of giving additional employment, the bill to reduce the hours of labor of the postal employes from 44 hours to 40 hours per week is sound.

* * * *

"I can not forget the splendid spirit of co-operation in which the postal employes accepted the reductions in their salaries and the payless furloughs during the period when it was necessary for the Department to observe the strictest of economy. As you know, Senator McKellar, my approval of this measure is in harmony with the general policy of the Administration."

House Bloc Drives For Lemke Bill

By the Associated Press.

A group of House liberals pledged themselves yesterday to oppose adjournment until Congress votes on the Frazier-Lemke farm refinancing bill and higher tax rates on inheritances and gifts.

Simultaneously, Representative Lemke (Republican), North Dakota, and a delegation of House members reported they had been virtually assured by President Roosevelt that he would do nothing to interfere with a House vote on the measure to refinance farm mortgages with $3,000,000,000 of new money. Furthermore, Lemke said the President felt it was right that the bill should be disposed of in the open and not be held up in committee.

Referring to a petition pending on the Speaker's desk to force the bill out of committee, Lemke said "we'll get the signatures by Friday which will force a vote on the bill."

Black Widow's Wits Defeat Centipede

By the Associated Press.

Oklahoma City, July 3.—A coy black widow spider displayed strategy today to take a decided advantage in a mortal battle royal with a tarantula and centipede.

Thrown into a glass jar with the other pests, the black widow, much the smallest of the trio, ran quickly to the top of the arena. From that vantage point she watched with cool detachment the elimination of her first enemy, the tarantula. In constrictor fashion, the centipede wrapped its body around the tarantula, crushing it to death in 17½ minutes.

Then the black widow went into action. With the deftness of a rodeo performer, she entangled the centipede, ten times her size, in web threads of her own spinning. Hampered and surly, the big centipede threshed about the enclosure. The black widow retired to a corner, apparently content for the time to remain outside the reach of the centipede, which was unable to pursue her up the slick walls of the cage.

taxes suggested by the President—levies on inheritances, gifts, corporation incomes and individual incomes over $1,000,000 a year.

Hope for Hot Weather.

"I don't believe there is a chance to get anything like the amount of money that has been talked about," Hill asserted. "For instance, my recollection is that the incomes above $1,000,000 a year produced only about $81,000,000 last year. Even if you taxed that 100 per cent, you wouldn't get enough to count—from a financial standpoint."

He indicated, too, that this subcommittee, which is holding almost daily conferences with Treasury officials, was thinking of reducing the inheritance tax exemption below the $300,000 suggested by Senator Harrison when the wealth distribution levies were being discussed in the Senate. But so far, Hill emphasized, there has been not even a tentative understanding on tax rates or expected revenue.

Manwhile, some members of the Ways and Means Committee agreed that they were "honor bound" to try to put a bill through this session. But privately they expressed the hope, if not the belief, that hot weather might make it necessary to postpone the measure until fall.

Bill Forbidding Loans for War Gains in House

Measure Bars Credits for All Save Allies of This Country.

By the Associated Press.

A bill to forbid American loans or extension of credits to the government or citizens of any warring nation was approved yesterday by the House Foreign Affairs Committee.

The measure would not, however, apply to a country engaged in war as an ally of the United States.

Describing loans and credits to nations in armed conflict as the "spearhead of the whole neutrality question," Representative Kloeb (Democrat), Ohio, author of the bill told the committee he drafted it "from the standpoint of attempting to do something for the preservation of white civilization, because I felt that should another major war come upon us and should we be drawn into it, it would threaten the very existence of future white civilization."

He said he felt with President Roosevelt that war is provoked by political leaders.

"Now if the leaders of these countries who are now inviting war could realize," he said, "that so far as the bankers of the world are concerned, the doors of their vaults are closed * * * in the event that they bring about another catastrophe, they are less likely to bring about that catastrophe."

The bill would impose a maximum fine of $10,000 and imprisonment up to five years for extension of credit or loans. Several similar bill have been introduced in the Senate.

Grass Roots Unit To Be Permanent

Organization to Be Formed in Chicago Soon.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, July 3.—Organization of a permanent Republican grass roots committee consisting of five members from each of the ten States participating in the recent Springfield conference will be completed at a meeting in Chicago within the next two weeks, it was announced today by Harrison Spangler, Iowa, Republican national committeeman.

Spangler, after a series of conferences with Chicago G. O. P. leaders yesterday, said that by September he expected States and counties to start staging local grass roots rallies.

He said: "Everywhere I find Democrats going along with the grass roots movement. Many ardent Democrats of two years ago are now saying the New Deal is in a state of bewilderment, that it is not getting anywhere, and the huge debt it is piling up is filling the air with a feeling of instability."

Byrnes Gets Threat Of Blease Opposition

Columbia, S. C., July 3 (AP).—United States Senator James F. Byrnes' proposal for broadened congressional authority to deal with interstate commerce today brought from Cole L. Blease, a former United States Senator and Governor, a threat to contest Byrnes' Senate seat on a "States' rights" platform.

In a statement preceding a States' rights address he is to deliver at Forest City, N. C., tomorrow, the veteran campaigner asserted "Jim Byrnes should be read out of the Democratic Party." Blease said he was out of politics, and wished to stay out, but would run against Byrnes on the States' rights question "if necessary."

up to enforce labor provisions in NRA codes, announced he would return to private law practice in Philadelphia within a few days. President Roosevelt Tuesday extended the life of the NLRB for one month, presumably in preparation for enforcement of the Wagner labor disputes bill.

Edwin Smith, former labor commissioner of Massachusetts, is the only remaining member of the NLRB. Dr. Harry A. Millis left several months ago to resume his position as head of the economics department of the University of Chicago. Smith is reported to be under consideration for appointment as chairman of the new Wagner board.

O'Neill said that interested industries will be advised to take their problems before the Federal Trade Commission. There will be no "goldfish bowl" and no elaborate hearings or publicity at the Federal Trade Commission. No effort will be made to "sell" the idea of codes or to persuade anyone to initiate agreements. Agreements when they are formulated will be binding only on members of industries actually signing them. Enforcement will be undertaken through cease and desist orders and other machinery ordinarily used by the commission.

The commission for 15 years has been making trade agreements. Under the present arrangement it is expected to go ahead much as it did before NRA came into existence.

Eccles Praises Banking Bill; Seeks Changes with the Reserve Board in a position to exercise a greater control over the amount of money in circulation.

One of the provisions in the revised banking bill regarded in Administration quarters as inadequate is that giving the Reserve Board authority to change deposit reserve requirements but not less than that now specified by law nor in excess of twice the present amount.

It was pointed out that under this provision the board would be able to increase deposit reserves by approximately $2,500,000,000, which is now about equal to the excess reserves of member banks. But excess reserves recently have been increasing and, it was asserted, it is possible for them to reach a figure $3,000,000,000 higher.

Increase Reserve Excess.

Use of the $2,000,000,000 "gold profit" now tied up in the stabilization fund would increase excess reserves by that much, it was explained. Use of the seigniorage on silver purchases also would add to excess reserves, while the inward movement of gold likewise swells excess reserves. In addition, any greenback issue, in connection with immediate payment of the bonus or otherwise, would further increase excess reserves, it was contended. The danger of excess reserves, should an inflationary movement start, is illustrated by the fact $1 of excess reserves will support $10 of credit.

Consequently, if excess reserves continue to go up, it was argued, the board would find it impossible to pull them down under the proposed power over deposit reserve requirements. The reserve board, it was argued, at least should have sufficient authority to increase reserve requirements to wipe out excess reserves at any time.

But despite instances of this kind, Gov. Eccles pointed out in his statement, that by concentrating open market powers in a central body (even though the composition of this body is not wholly satisfactory) with authority to enforce their decisions; by permitting the reserve board to change reserve requirements and by leaving with the board power to determine and make effective discount rates, the Glass bill "represents a substantial improvement over the existing situation."

Congress Guns For Lobbyists On Holding Bill

(Democrat), Alabama, author of the resolution.

Another bill by Black to require registration and periodic reports of all lobbyists already has been passed by the Senate and is waiting House Judiciary sub-committee hearings. But requirements equally as stringent, as affects utility company representatives, were slipped into the Wheeler-Rayburn bill before that left the House.

The House lobby investigation opening next week turns directly on charges that Thomas Corcoran, RFC attorney and one of the authors of the Wheeler-Rayburn utility bill, threatened to stop Passamaquoddy Dam construction in Maine if Representative Ralph O. Brewster, Republican, and former Governor of that State, voted against the "death sentence."

But while Brewster's charges prompted the inquiry, the scope is so broad that before the House and Senate get through with their probings the utility company lobbyists themselves probably will come in for most of the fire.

At the outset Corcoran, Benjamin Cohen, Government attorney who worked with Corcoran in framing the bill; Emil Hurja, Postmaster General Farley's assistant on the Democratic National committee, and Charles West, White House "contact man," may be called before the committee.

President Roosevelt, at yesterday's White House press conference, had little to say about either the charges of "undue influence" or the defeat of the House "death sentence" section.

Quoting from Southey's 'After Blenheim," he used the words of old Kaspar:

"'Why, that I can not tell,' said he, 'but 'twas a famous victory'."

Representative Samuel B. Pettengill (Democrat), Indiana, author of a resolution calling for the House inquiry, said he had talked with Corcoran and Cohen scores of times, as well as representatives of utilities interests, but "never received their threats or promises."

"If the $4,000,000,000 works fund has been used as a club over anybody's head, of course we want to know it," said Pettengill. "But I have no personal knowledge that anything of the sort has been done. Nor has any member of my delegation. Mr. Brewster's charges came as a surprise to me."

Speaker Byrns promised a thorough investigation.

Representative Hamilton Fish, jr. (Republican), of New York, who first proposed the inquiry, said it ought to be "a thorough, impartial and non-partisan investigation."

"Let the chips fall where they may," he said. "We ought to put an end to this rotten situation of coercing members of Congress, whether it is done by representatives of the Administration or by agents of special privilege."

"Right to Views."

He asserted, however, that "the people have a perfect right to express their views on legislation, whether through petition or otherwise," so long as there is no coercion.

"But the time has come," he said, "to stamp out those pernicious attempts to influence the votes of members."

When the Black resolution, for a Senate inquiry was called up yesterday, Senator J. Hamilton Lewis, of Illinois, asked whether it would include House lobbying or be limited to the Senate.

"I intended it to be all-embracing," said Black, "and for that reason it is my opinion that it is utter folly to discuss making an investigation without an appropriation."

Huey Long delivered a lengthy attack on holding companies in general, and said the Wheeler-Rayburn bill should have been broadened to include all holding units, particularly in the food industry. He urged a "two-way" investigation, touching Administration as well as utility company activities at the Capitol.

"Isn't it a matter for Congress to find out whether you are told that a project in your State will not go through unless you vote a certain way?" Long asked. "Members of Congress have been dehorned of patronage. This Congressman had this done to him and this Senator had that done to him."

While the lobby battle rages in the offing, Senator William H. Dietrich (Democrat), of Illinois, will move in the Senate Monday to concur in the House ban on the holding company "death sentence." Senator Burton K. Wheeler (Democrat), Montana, on the other hand, will attempt to send the bill to conference. Wheeler said he was willing to compromise in conference on absolute abolition only of holding companies in on above "the second degree." As it passed the Senate, the bill made dissolution of companies more than one degree removed from their operating subsidiaries, mandatory.

Letters Praise, Rap Relief Ban Of Millionaire

Employer of 1,000 Men Is Besieged by Throngs Seeking Jobs.

By the Associated Press.

Duncan, Okla., July 3.—An avalanche of letters from job hunters descended upon Millionaire Erle P. Halliburton today as his one-man fight against what he calls "the dole" drew Nation-wide attention.

"I can't hire all of them," was Halliburton's comment as he turned from a pile of applications to three large stacks of communications both lauding and condemning him.

Halliburton—a slight, alert individual, who once flew through a storm "to find out how it felt"—drew the mountain of mail by proclaiming that no person who has accepted relief can work in his enterprises.

He employs more than 1,000 men in a Los Angeles investment firm, a Honduras gold mine, a race track, a baseball team and his oil well cementing company headquarters here.

Job Seekers More Numerous.

Unsigned letters from Palos Verdes Estate, Calif.; Columbus, Ohio; Beaumont, Tex., and other parts of the Nation assailed Halliburton as "heartless," and declared "if every one was like you, we poor devils would starve. Hope you get in the same boat and like it."

"The commendations are running from 6-to-1 to 8-to-1 ahead of the squawks," Halliburton said, grinning. "But letters asking for jobs are more numerous than all the others combined."

Laudatory letters came from Rogers, Ark., New York City, Highland Park, Mich.; Kansas City, Carthage, Mo.; Trenton, N. J.; Hyattsville, Md.; Tulsa, Okla.; Topeka, Kans.; Waco, Tex.; Des Moines, Iowa; Houston, Tex.; Philadelphia, Pa.; Beaumont, Tex., and other cities.

Suggested for President.

Three of the writers wanted Halliburton to run for President.

A man from Houston, Tex., wrote two letters the same day.

A jobless Kansas City girl called his order an incentive to persons seeking work.

"Here in Kansas City when you apply for a job, they ask if you are on relief," she wrote. "If you are not you don't get the job."

A Tulsa, Okla., girl penned:

"The 'on relief group' multiplies three times as fast as the better class. While the taxpayer of today has only one family aside from his own to keep, the next generation will have three aside from its own and the one after that nine families aside from its own.

"The only way to stop the dole is to stop it."

Fifth Man Quits As Roper Adviser

Bell, Minneapolis Miller, Resigns From Council.

By the Associated Press.

The ranks of the Roper business advisory council were depleted further yesterday with the resignation of James F. Bell, Minneapolis miller, the fifth departure within two weeks.

Secretary Roper disclosed the resignation, but continued to maintain that the vacancies would be filled and the council, now composed of 43 business leaders, would continue operation.

The council meets formally in Washington next Wednesday.

Gen. Robert E. Wood, chairman of Sears, Roebuck & Co., resigned a few days ago from the advisory allotment board of the works relief program, but has remained on the advisory council.

The others who resigned were Robert L. Lund, board chairman of the National Association of Manufacturers; Harold C. Smith, Chicago, president Illinois Tool Works; Edward L. Ryerson, jr., Chicago, president Joseph L. Ryerson & Son, Inc., and Howard Heinz, Pittsburgh, president H. J. Heinz Co.

Mrs. Nina Vidal Gets Reno Divorce

Silent on Reports She Intends to Remarry.

By the Associated Press.

Reno, Nev., July 3.—Mrs. Nina Gore Vidal was divorced today from Eugene L. Vidal, director of the Bureau of Air Commerce. She refused to comment on reports she intends to remarry.

The brunette daughter of United States Senator Thomas P. Gore of Oklahoma emerged from a brief, locked-door trial before District Judge Thomas F. Moran smilingly to remark that she "knew nothing about" reports of a new marital venture. Her name has been linked with that of Hugh D. Auchincloss, socially prominent broker who recently returned to his home in Washington after a visit in Nevada.

The private trial, at which she charged Vidal, noted World War flier and one-time all-American half back at West Point, with extreme cruelty, required but a few minutes. They were married at Washington January 11, 1922. The court approved a separation agreement which made provisions for the future custody of their son, Eugene, jr., 9.

Long Cancels Speech To End Controversy

Stamford, Conn., July 3 (AP).—United States Senator Huey P. Long has decided to cancel his proposed speaking engagement here July 13 rather than be the center of a local controversy, it was announced today by Lester P. Barlow, the Senator's representative.

Barlow quoted Senator Long as refusing to come if his visit would result in any ill feeling. The original announcement of Long's intended visit met with discouragement from Mayor Alfred N. Phillips, jr., who refused to give the Louisiana Senator permission to use a city park.

Abducted Child Believed in D. C.

Trail Leads to Washington as U. S. Joins Hunt.

By the Associated Press.

Greenville, S. C., July 3.—Federal agents today joined the search for 13-year-old Audrey Jones, of the Greer Mill section, as local officers expressed the belief she had been carried to Washington by abductors.

Warrants charging Harold Bishop and his two women companions, Botch Long and Kathleen Long, all of near here, with abduction, have been issued. Botch Long was arrested and released under bond as officers took up the trail of the others at a grocery store where the child was said to have been slapped as her companions, a man and a woman, told her they were taking her to Washington.

The child has been missing since Saturday night, when she was said by witnesses to have entered a car near her home. S. D. Jones, the child's father, said Federal agents had taken up the search on the possibility that the case might involve violation of the Lindbergh kidnaping law.

Justice Carew, advised of the decision upholding him, smiled and declared, "then it must be right."

The terms of the lower court's ruling, which made little Gloria a ward of the State, gives Mrs. Whitney custody five days a week and Mrs. Vanderbilt the week-ends and the month of July. Since the sensational seven-weeks custody hearing Mrs. Vanderbilt has been awarded her annual allowance of $48,000 from her daughter's $4,000,000 fortune.

Maid's Story Discarded.

The appellate decision came just as little Gloria began her July stay with her mother at a Long Island estate rented solely for the purpose. Except for the week-end visits, Gloria has been living at Mrs. Whitney's Westbury estate on Long Island, her home since 1932 when Mrs. Vanderbilt went to Europe.

The appellate ruling, while condemning conditions under which the child lived in Mrs. Vanderbilt's care, threw out the hearing testimony of Mrs. Vanderbilt's personal maid, Marie Caillot, making allegations of misconduct against Mrs. Vanderbilt and Lady Milford-Haven, wife of the British peer.

Plans New Appeal.

"We think that the charge which rests upon the testimony of the maid, Caillot," the opinion said, "elicited upon cross-examination, is so detrimental to the relator and the evidence to support it so unsubstantial that she was entitled to unqualified and complete exoneration."

That part of the opinion brought an expression of gratitude from Mrs. Vanderbilt.

"Thank God they exonerated me of those disgraceful charges that I had no chance to defend," she said.

She was lunching at a fashionable midtown restaurant with her sister, Lady Furness, when apprised of the decision.

"They're wrong about the rest of it, though," Mrs. Vanderbilt exclaimed. "The decision means only one thing. I shall take the case to the highest court in the State as soon as my attorneys can file an appeal."

As in the case of the lower court hearing, the appellate devision sealed the record of the case from public scrutiny.

Long Hotel Tilt Appears Mere Shadow Boxing

It All Started When He Stepped on Toes in Dancing, Says Huey.

Taking the general average of the two versions of the bout at the Shoreham Hotel between Senator Huey P. Long and Burr Tracey Ansell, local attorney, as told by the principals themselves, it would appear that the contest was at most merely shadow boxing.

Ansell is the son of former Army Judge Advocate General Samuel T. Ansell, who has a $500,000 libel suit pending in District Supreme Court against Long as the result of a speech the Senator made assailing him as counsel for the Senate committee which investigated the election of Senator Overton, Long's colleague.

According to Ansell, Long came to his table on the Shoreham terrace Tuesday night where he and his wife were with a group of friends. Ansell said he was angered by Long's presence. He stood up and swung his right first at the Senator, who ducked and backed away, he said.

A man who had come to the table with Long, Ansell said, held him until Long disappeared. This man was courteous and the incident was dropped. A group which had gathered at the table went back to dancing.

Long, who received a blow in the eye at Sandy Point, Long Island, has been a frequent guest at the Shoreham terrace this season. Tuesday night he was dancing there with a platinum blonde, who, Huey said, had prevailed upon him to try a few steps.

"I stepped on her toes, I stepped on my toes, and then I was stepping on all toes," the Senator said. Fnally, he explained, one dancer stopped him and asked what he was doing. Long said he replied: "That's what I've been trying to find out," and followed this with an apology.

Iowa Jury Indicts Attorney General

O'Connor and Aid Accused in 'Gambling Conspiracy.'

By the Associated Press.

Sioux City, Iowa, July 3.—The attorney general of Iowa and his first assistant were indicted here today on charges of "conspiracy to operate gambling houses and gambling devices."

The Woodbury County grand jury returned the indictments after a three months' investigation of alleged corruption and graft in Iowa public offices.

Eighteen other men, including 12 members of an alleged Sioux City slot machine syndicate indicted last week, were named in the indictments against Attorney General Edward L. O'Connor and Assistant Attorney General Walter Maley. Two other persons, a man and his wife, were accused of conspiracy in a separate indictment and one perjury indictment was returned.

The bonds for defendants in the O'Connor-Maley indictments were set at $3,000 each. Date for trial was not fixed.

2 Believed Drowned As British Plane Falls

Portsmouth, England, July 3 (AP). A warship and Royal Air Force flying boats searched in vain today for a British air liner reported to have fallen into the Channel off the Isle of Wight after sending out S O S calls.

No trace of wreckage was found, but a patch of oil on the surface about 10 miles from shore gave a clew to the probably fate of the two persons aboard, Pilot Capt. Ogden, 30, and a passenger named Grainger. The machine was flying to England from Channel Islands.

1 Dead, 9 Hurt in Tornado.

Crookston, Minn., July 3 (AP).—One person was killed, another was reported injured fatally and at least eight other persons were injured in a tornado and rain storm southeast of here today.

Orators Today May Signalize New Deal Fight

TalmadgeTalk to Set Pace; Roosevelt Will Spend Day at Work.

By the Associated Press.

Challenges facing President Roosevelt in his re-election campaign may be signalized in today's celebrations of the Fourth.

Division among Southern Democrats over the Administration course, especially noticeable of late, will be marked at Canton, Ga., in a speech by Gov. Talmadge.

The Republican wing led by former President Hoover is looking to two brief addresses by him at Grass Valley, Calif., for fresh evidence of his position.

Mr. Roosevelt himself plans to remain in the White House, probably to work. Democratic national headquarters said last night it knew of no speeches scheduled on behalf of the New Deal.

TVA Is Worry Now.

Elsewhere it was said some Administration leaders would be privately active over the week-end in an effort to forestall threats of another House uprising next week, this time on the projected strengthening of the TVA.

Upon the trend of developments in Congress and the way dispute over the tax program points up, could depend the pre-conventoin strategy of the major parties.

The Talmadge speech, in the opinion of some politically-alert Georgians, may herald a presidential primary campaign fight there between the President and the Governor.

A simultaneous pro-Roosevelt rally at Warm Springs was called off, it was said, because the President "prefers that nothing of a political nature" be associated with that health community.

Blease May Fight Byrnes.

Gov. Talmadge has connected his opposition to NRA and AAA principles with defense of State's rights. He was joined in the latter yesterday by former Senator Blease, of South Carolina, who threatened to oppose Senator Byrnes for renomination on the isssue "if necessary."

Byrnes stirred dispute in the State recently by a speech siding with the Roosevelt view of the NRA smash-up, namely, that a constitutional amendment might be required unless some other way is found for the Federal Government to handle national economic and social problems.

If Mr. Hoover goes into constitutional questions, his words will be analyzed as focussing the issue the more.

"Save the Constitution" has been projected by former Vice President Curtis as one Republican campaign basis.

Court Tests to Show Way.

And now organization Republicans, although cold to suggestions for a coalition ticket against the New Deal next year, talk more often of attracting Democrats to their standard. Harrison Spangler, Iowa G. O. P. committeeman, active in the recent Springfield, Ill., rally, evidenced it yesterday in Chicago when he spoke of finding Democrats everywhere "going along with the grass roots movement."

If the Administration is concerned, it gives no outward sign. Rather than curtail the New Deal, the President has added to it to such an extent that adjournment of Congress is indefinite.

More cases are piling up in the courts, and more are expected, once the Wagner labor, Guffey coal and the social security bills are in actual operation as law. Until the Supreme Court rules on these, the AAA and TVA, and the business situation becomes more decisively clear, expectations for 1936 must be held subject to revision.

Boettiger Ignores Charge of Culkin

Hays Also Declines Comment on Accusation.

By the Associated Press.

New York, July 3.—John Boettiger, son-in-law of the President and assistant to Will Hays, today said he had decided "to ignore" the charge of Representative Culkin, of New York, which was placed in the Congressional Record.

Culkin charged that Hays employed Boettiger to keep from being ousted as president of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, Inc.

Hollywood, Calif., July 3 (AP).—Will Hays, president of the Association of Motion Picture Producers, declined to comment today on the statement concerning him made in Washington by Representative Culkin.

"Certainly not," said Hays, when asked if he would reply to Culkin.

Promptly at 8 o'clock the invocation is scheduled to be given by the Rev. Arthur A. O'Leary, newly appointed president of Georgetown University. The flag-raising ceremony will follow. Halsey, secretary of the Senate; playing of patriotic airs by the Marine Band and drill maneuvers by legionnaires. The first of the fireworks will be set off at 8:35 o'clock.

Approximately 75,000 packed the Monument Grounds last year for the night celebration. Some 35,000 others witnessed the aerial fireworks from the Smithsonian and Agriculture grounds and along the Mount Vernon Memorial highway.

Eight thousand chairs for the gala show have been placed on sale at 25 cents each. Tickets will be available today at hotels, newspaper offices, and on the grounds, it was announced by the citizens' committee arranging the program.

The United States Flag Association is conducting separate exercises, including a radio program which will feature addresses by Assistant Secretary of War Harry H. Woodring and former Secretary Patrick J. Hurley. Col. James A Moss, president general of the association, will preside.

Track Meet Scheduled.

A track and field meet will be held at the National Training School for Boys, on Blandensburg road, near the District line. Youngsters at St. Joseph's Home and School, Eastern avenue and Bunker Hill road northeast, will mark the holiday by dedicating their new swimming pool.

Dr. George F. Bowerman, librarian, announced that the central library and all branches will be closed all day. The doors of the Library of Congress likewise will be shut.

Emergency traffic regulations which will be enforced today in Potomac Park were announced by Frank T. Gartside, acting superintendent of National Capital Parks, and Capt. Patrick J. Carroll, park police chief.

Driving through the Monument Grounds will be prohibited after 6 p. m., with the exception of the south roadway north of the Bureau of Engraving and Printing, where traffic will be permitted westbound along the Fifteenth street roadway in the rear of the bureau.

Parking will be allowed on both sides of the Tidal Basin roadway, around the polo grounds, on Constitution avenue west of Seventeenth street to the river and in the rear of the Navy and Munitions Buildings.

Motorists holding reserved parking tickets were requested to display them on the windshield and to enter the Monument Grounds from Fourteenth street at the roadway north of the Bureau of Engraving and Printing, passing the Sylvan Theater and continuing to the Sixteenth street roadway, where policemen will direct them to parking spaces.

Playground to Open.

John R. Adams, for 14 years a member of the Takoma Park (Md.) Town Council, will deliver the main speech at the patriotic exercises which will open the suburb's new playground on Philadelphia avenue. Judge Herman C. Heffner is general chairman of the celebration committee, assisted by Mrs. Byron McCoon, Wallace Magathan, Walter Irey, Hardin C. Waters and Robert M. Lyon.

Commander E. Brooke Fetty, of the Takoma Park American Legion Post, is marshal of the parade, which will form in the vicinity of the new Piney Branch road underpass and proceed over Piney Branch road to Cedar street and over Carroll street, Carroll avenue, Denwood avenue, Park avenue, Maple avenue, Philadelphia avenue and Holly avenue to the playground.

Associated Press dispatches last night said that the rest of the country is preparing for the holiday in a variety of ways. Gov. Olin D. Johnston of South Carolina ordered all liquor stores closed until sunrise tomorrow. Plenty of noise-making over the country was predicted by manufacturers in Fireworks Station, Ill., where fireworks is the only industry. Business is better than last year, they said.

Three hundred Japanese girls of Seattle, Wash., will perform in an ancient dance festival in commemoration of the anniversary. A premature celebrator was reported fatally burned in Evansville, Ind., when a firecracker exploded inside a gasoline-filled hose. He was a 4-year-old boy.

Gardel, Argentine actor and idol of Latin-American girls, died in an airplane crash at Medellin, Colombia, on June 24.

Easing of Tax On Bill to Aid Idle Is Sought

Halt on Levy If Reserve Fund Is Adequate Asked of Senators.

The Senate District Committee yesterday was asked to amend the Ellenbogen unemployment insurance bill so an employer or group of employers might stop paying the 3 per cent tax after accumulating an adequate reserve fund.

The request was made by James McD. Shea, president of the Building Owners and Managers Association of the District, in a letter addressed to Senator Royal S. Copeland (Democrat), of New York, chairman of the sub-committee in charge of the bill.

Shea suggested a reserve account of $75 for each employe might be adequate in industries, such as the rental of buildings, where employment is stable.

"This is similar to the plan now in operation in Wisconsin and recently adopted by Utah," Shea wrote.

"It gives an incentive for employers or a group of employers to attempt to regularize their employment. If they are successful, they are rewarded by having their contributions reduced or stopped as long as the minimum reserve for each employe is kept in the employer's account."

The Senate committee expects to act on the Ellenbogen bill as soon as conferees agree on the national social security measure.

Judge Would 'Run' Reds Out of Nation

Victim Not Communistic, So Attackers Fined.

Every Communist should be "run out of the country," Judge Robert E. Mattingly declared in Police Court yesterday after hearing assault charges against Harry L. Lambdon, a member of the local Transient Bureau.

Lambdon was accused of striking Charles Barrett, also a transient, and fracturing his nose. Barrett said he was struck without provacation. Lambdon, however, charged that Barrett had recently distributed communistic pamphlets throughout transient lodges and that the blow was struck after he had been called several names.

"If there had been sufficient evidence to show that this fight was a result of communistic activities my verdict would have been different," Judge Mattingly declared. "However, I fine the defendant $25."

Road Program Gets Under Way At Arlington

$285,000 to Be Cost of Work Partially Financed by PWA Grant.

ARLINGTON COUNTY BUREAU OF THE POST.
Tel. Clar. 509. Clarendon, Va.

A $285,000 road program was started yesterday, it was revealed at the office of County Manager Roy S. Braden.

The program is divided into two classifications, the first being work done with funds from the county budget, of which there is an allotment for roads for the entire year of $135,000. The second involves the reconditioning of roads along which sewers have been installed and for which $150,000 was set aside from the funds obtained through the Public Works Administration for the installation of the sewer system.

Approximately $40,000 will be used from the conty funds this summer in shaping all county roads along which sewers are not being installed.

The school census for Arlington County, which is taken every five years, as provided by law, shows a total of 8,337 pupils, of which 7,258 are white and the remaining 1,079 colored. Five years ago the census showed a total of 7,940, of which 6,461 were white and 1,479 colored, showing a total increase in the five years of 397.

The enrollment for the past year was 6,277, of whicl. 5,545 were white children and 632 colored, as against 4,840 attending school in 1930, of which 4,282 were white and 558 colored children.

This shows a gain in school enrollment during the past five years of 1,437 children, of which 1,363 were white and 74 were colored.

The possible gain in school enrollment this fall as a result of the heavy increase in building in the county, which is bringing more people in the county, could not be estimated at the office of the superintendent yesterday.

Proposed amendments to the State laws, one for a change in the date of election of the Arlington County board, another asking direct election of members of the school electoral board and a third reducing the fees collected by the clerk of the court, were favored by the Arlington County Civic Federation at its meeting last night at Lyon Park.

It is proposed to change the election of members of the county board to spring, thereby separating it from the general election held in November. The reason for seeking this change, according to Charles R. Fenwick, chairman of the legislative committee, is to keep this particular election from getting lost in the campaigns for other county offices.

The school electoral board proposal, it was stated, is a plan to give the citizens a direct voice in the management of school affairs. Under the existing law the judge of the Circuit Court appoints the school electoral board, which appoints the county school board, and the latter appoints the school superintendent.

The proposals will take their place in a definite legislative program to be adopted by the federation before the next session of the General Assembly.

The application of the Carne Precinct Citizens Association for membership was accepted. The delegates are as follows: Philip T. Williams, Commander Ralph E. Sampson, Murray Sheehan and Miss Frances Powell Hill. The alternates are Mrs. Gorham Freer, Mrs. William M. Doak, G. W. Quick, and Carl M. Walker.

Today being a holiday, all offices at the courthouse will be closed excepting that of Sheriff Howard B. Fields.

The monthly meeting of the Arlington Fire Department originally scheduled for last night, was postponed and will be held next Wednesday night at the firehouse.

Navy Music School Established Here

Lieut. Benter to Be in Charge of Training Band.

Establishment of the Navy School of Music, a training institution to furnish musicians for the bands of the Navy, was announced yesterday by the Navy Department. Lieut. Charles Benter, director of the United States Navy Band, has been assigned as officer in charge of the new school, which will be located at the Washington Navy Yard.

An applicant for admission to the school will be enlisted in the regular Navy, designated as apprentice seamen (musician), and sent to Washington for further examination. If successful, he will enter the first class, which will be composed of 80 men. At the conclusion of one year's training, 40 men will be graduated and assigned to duty in the bands of the fleet, and the remaining 40 will receive another year's instruction.

Succeeding classes will be composed of 40 men each, and the course of instruction will be two years for each entrant. Applicants for training in the school must be between 17 and 22 years of age and graduates of a high school, or with training and experience equivalent to a high-school education. They must also have had some experience in either a band or orchestra.

Under the regulations, successful applicants are to be enlisted for six years, of which two will be devoted to a course of training in theory, practice and ensemble playing, and the remaining four to band service.

Conrad G. Gebelein, 18, of Baltimore, who has registered at the University of Maryland Summer School in order to complete his college career in two years. He expects to get his doctorate by the time he is 22.

Conrad Geblein, German Artist's Son, Would Take Degree Onto Stage.

Through "prep" school and college—a nine-year course—in six years, then on to a doctorate in English before he passes his twenty-second year.

Such is the ambition of 18-year-old Conrad G. Gebelein, of Baltimore, who returned to the University of Maryland for the summer session which opened Thursday.

Having finished his registration, which placed him in the junior class, although he entered college only last fall, the youthful nephew of Germany's noted artist, Hans Gebelein, paused to explain his ambitions.

"Although I expect to receive my doctor of philosophy degree by the time I am 22, I do not intend to use it. I only want the degree to fall back on. My real ambition is to go on the vaudevile stage."

Plays Several Instruments.

The son of a music professor at Johns Hopkins University, Gebelein plays seven different instruments. In fact he has been playing the piano since he was 3 years old. He gave his first recital at the age of 5.

At this age he entered Peabody Conservatory of Music—the youngest pupil ever to be enrolled there. During the 13 years since then he has learned to play, besides the piano, the piano accordion, Hawaiian guitar, xylophone, Spanish guitar, violin and trumpet.

Asked what orchestras he had played with, he was unable to count them. He explained that this was because there were so many he had accompanied for one engagement only. He has also, intermittently, broadcast over four radio stations in Maryland.

An Athlete as Well.

At No. 83 Graded School, Baltimore, he finished a six-year course in five years. Then at Baltimore City College, a preparatory school, he completed the five-year course in four years.

In "City" he held the State track record for the 440-yard and 220-yard dash. He also won the Maryland scholastic championship.

Entering the University of Maryland last September, he was given the rating of a sophomore. Besides leading his classes in studies, he became prominent in the glee club, orchestra, band, and on the track team.

He expects to "take next summer off" and tour Germany, his father's native land.

Court Ends Attempt To Remove Saunders

Richmond, Va., July 3 (AP).—Ouster proceedings against City Sergt. John G. Saunders, whose accounts for 1922-1933 inclusive were reported more than $10,000 short last week by State Auditor Downs, were quashed today by Hustings Court Judge John L. Ingram on motion of Commonwealth's Attorney T. Gray Haddon.

The action ending proceedings against Saunders was attributed to the fact that his accounts since January 1, 1934, were reported complete by Mr. Downs.

A grand jury on Monday absolved the sergeant from criminal liability in connection with the alleged shortage, which Saunders paid over to the city after it was reported by the auditor.

Lyddane Trial Costs County $1,175 for Aids

ExpertSummoned by Pugh Charges $100 Per Day for Testimony.

Montgomery County failed to convict Mrs. Anne Lyddane, blonde bank employe of Rockville, and two men of conspiracy to murder her husband, Francis ("Slom") Lyddane, but it spent $1,175 for expert witnesses in an effort to obtain a conviction.

Bills totaling this amount were approved for payment yesterday by the board of county commissioners. The bills were rendered by expert witnesses called by the State in the case which ended with a hung jury several weeks ago.

Ira N. Gullickson, typewriter and handwriting expert, charged the county $475 for examining and identifying the handwriting on a note alleged to have been written by one of the men charged with conspiracy, and for two days of testimony.

A bill of $700 was submitted by Bert C. Farrar, examiner of questioned documents of the Treasury Department. Farrar charged $480 for examinations, $100 a day for two days in court, and $20 for an assistant who sat in court.

In addition to these bills the commissioners also approved for payment a bill of $168.80 for board and lodging of the jury during the trial. The bills were presented to the board by States Attorney James H. Pugh, who conducted the prosecution of the case.

He started to the water's edge and was about to enter the river when he staggered and fell.

The youth's body was recovered immediately by Harvey Walker, one of the cyclists, but attempts to revive him were futile. Physicians said his death was caused by heart failure due to immersion in cold water.

Miller, who had lived in the White Oak community all his life, was a graduate of Fairland High School. For the past three years he had conducted a garage at Colesville, Md. Besides his parents, he is survived by four sisters, Mrs. Ernest Amos, Mrs. Richard Tolbert, Eleanor Miller and Agnes Miller, all living at White Oak.

Fairfax Wants Road Improved At Great Falls

FAIRFAX BUREAU OF THE POST.
P. O. Box 245, Fairfax, Va.
Phone Clarendon 126-J.

The board of supervisors of Fairfax County, Va., yesterday adopted a resolution urging the State highway commission to increase the allocations for the secondary highway system to include hard surfacing of the road between Andrew Chapel and Great Falls. The action was taken at the request of the citizens living along this 3 miles of highway.

A committee from the association informed the board that the cost of improving the road would be approximately $8,000. There are 27 families living directly on the road, which serves several other communities. Since the abandonment of the Great Falls trolley line this section of the county was practically isolated during bad weather because of the condition of the roads. The board indorsed the request of the citizens as a necessary project warranting immediate attention.

The treasurer reported that at the beginning of the 1935-36 fiscal year there was a balance of approximately $14,000 in the general county funds to meet county expenses until taxes are collected in November. During the period from July until November last year the delinquent tax collections totaled $4,500 and the city expenditures were $15,000. It was stated that if the county expenditures over that period this year do not exceed those of last year it is believed the county can meet its obligations without borrowing funds in anticipation of tax collections.

Mrs. Pearl Edler, county welfare director, reported that a tentative agreement had been reached with the Washington Community Chest relative to charity contributions made by residents of the county working in Washington during the Chest drive.

She stated that this year two pledge cards would be distributed by the Chest and residents of the county would be given a choice of contributing to county charity or Washington charities. The pledge cards will be returned to the county designated and collections made directly by the county organizations instead of through the Community Chest.

The town authorities of Falls Church, Va., yesterday issued a warning that they plan to make a drive against persons shooting fireworks on or near the public highways today. Mayor L. P. Daniel stated last night that in past years several persons had been injured in the town by fireworks being thrown from and into passing automobiles. Offenders will be subjected to a heavy fine for violation of the town ordinance.

The Business and Professional Women's Club of Fairfax County yesterday voted to retain Mrs. Francis Pickens Miller, of Fairfax, as president for the second year. This was caused by the resignation of the recently elected president, Miss Elizabeth Ellmore, who has accepted employment outside Fairfax County.

Arrangements were made to conduct the activities of the club through committees, each committee to have charge of one or more programs during the year.

Chairmen named for the various committees are: Legislative, Mrs. G. Wallace Carper; education, Miss Hazel Davis; research, Mrs. David Laforest Wing; health, Mrs. James E. Nickell; public relations, Mrs. M. D. Hall; international relations, Mrs. Elsie Davis; employment, Mrs. Pearl Edler; finance and taxes, Mrs. Elizabeth Chilcott.

Fire of undetermined origin destroyed the community hall at Fairfax Station early yesterday morning. The loss was estimated at $1,500. The volunteer fire department of Fairfax responded to the alarm, but hampered by the lack of water, confined its efforts to keeping the flames from spreading to nearby homes.

90 Girl Scouts Are Registered At Start of Silver Spring Camp

Arthur Blakeslee Wins 3 Awards From Lions Club.

Herbert Butts, a Montgomery County policeman who has been incapacitated for more than a year as a result of injuries suffered in line of duty, has been removed from the county pay roll, it was learned last night.

Butts received a letter from Ira Whitacre, clerk to the board of county commissioners, saying his salary had stopped on June 30. This action was taken because there was no provision in the levy for funds to pay him, the letter said.

The separation of Butts from the pay roll was not voted on by the commissioners, Frank Karns, president of the board, said last night. It was automatic through the failure to provide for his salary in the levy. Karns said that the matter might be considered by the board, but this consideration is not assured.

Butts was injured on June 16, 1934, after a raid near Etchison, Md. He was riding on the side of a car when it skidded into a bank, crushing him between the bank and the car. He was in the hospital for three months and is still receiving biweekly treatment for his injuries.

Since his accident, Butts has been receiving two-thirds of his salary from an insurance company, which protects the policemen, and one-third from the county. Whether the company payments will continue neither Butts nor Karns knows. Butts' hospital bill is still unsettled. The company pays such bills up to $500, but Butts' account is more than that, he said.

The club was commended for its year's work by Arthur Clarendon Smith, president of the Federation of Civic and Service Clubs, past president of the Washington Lions Club and former district governor of the Twenty-second District of Lions International, who was the guest speaker. He asked the club's co-operation in the federation.

Citroen Dead; Auto Industry King in France

Wreck of Factory Empire Held Contributory to Magnate's Death.

By the Associated Press.

Paris, July 3.—Andre Gustave Citroen, once Europe's automobile king, died today six months after his 2,000,000,000-franc enterprise collapsed. He was 57 years old.

Through his last lingering illness the short, dapper little engineer whose mass production methods won him the name "Henry Ford of France" watched efforts of others to bring order out of the wreck of his huge companies.

Among his last words was expression of joy that the vast factories, which employ 30,000 workers, again were running.

Worry over the receivership into which the enterprise was forced December 21, 1934, combined with the wasting effects of his illness to cause his death. He weighed only 70 pounds, half his usual weight, when he died.

An obscure engineer, Citroen was associated with the pioneer Mors automobile works before the war. He was supposed to have become wealthy manufacturing munitions during the war. The year after it ended he turned his fortune and his quick brain to manufacturing cheap automobiles in France, applying American methods. Thereafter his career was meteoric.

A daughter, Jacqueline, died recently. Mme. Citroen and two sons, Bernard and Maxime, survive.

Bellefonte, Pa., July 3 (AP).—William Deni, gangland gunman, died in the electric chair at Rockview Penitentiary early today for the murder of Policeman Harry J. Donahue in Philadelphia. A wan smile was on his face as he walked into the death chamber between two guards. His knees shook as he was assisted to the chair.

"The big bad wolf got me," were his only words.

Deni shot Policeman Donahue outside a Philadelphia social club in February, 1934. His defense was that he believed Donahue, who was not in uniform at the time, was a rival gangster out to get him.

Jurist Dies

Harris & Ewing.

JUSTICE WILLIAM HITZ.

Heart Ailment Causes Death Of Justice Hitz

Popular Jurist Stricken on Leaving Home for Court; Named in 1916.

Hitz also practiced his unconventional wishes and wielded his rapierlike retorts. He was a golfer in his younger days, but used only one club, an iron. When twitted about his lack of equipment, he replied:

"The fewer the clubs, the better the alibis."

During his 20 years on the bench, Justice Hitz presided over many famous trials. It was he who sentenced Harry F. Sinclair to serve three months in jail for contempt of court.

He also presided over the trial of Albert B. Fall, former Secretary of the Interior, charged with accepting a $100,000 bribe from Edward L. Doheny, California oil man. He sentenced Fall to pay a fine of $100,000 and serve a year in jail.

Justice Hitz was on the bench when Doheny was acquitted of giving the bribe to Fall. He also presided over the trial of G. Bryan Pitts and his associates and in other well-known criminal cases.

Cummings Pays Tribute.

Tributes to Justice Hitz came from many. Attorney General Cummings said:

"I am deeply grieved by the death of Justice Hitz. His judicial career was one of the greatest distinction. Coupled with his wide legal knowledge, he possessed endearing personal qualities of directness, friendliness and humor that were a characteristic reflection of the inner man. His death is a loss to the Federal bench and will leave, among his legion of friends, a vacant place that can not be filled."

Justice Hitz's death was described as a great loss to the community at large and to the bench and bar of the District in a resolution adopted by The Barristers.

Attorney Robert I. Miller brought the news of the death to the four branches of District Police Court. He said: "His great humanitarianism during his long judicial career has made him most beloved, and his character a sterling example."

Justice Hitz's death was noted in the records of these four courts. Their four judges paid tributes to his record and personal qualities.

It is believed that Justice Hitz's post may be filled through the appointment of Justice Jennings Bailey, now an associate on the bench of District Supreme Court. United States Attorney Leslie C. Garnett, it is thought, may be appointed to the vacancy left by Bailey's elevation. It is understood that Garnett took his present post with the understanding that he was to get the first vacancy on the bench of District Supreme Court.

Born in 1872.

Justice Hitz was born here April 21, 1872. He was educated at Harvard University and Georgetown University Law School. He was admitted to the bar in 1899 and practiced law with the firm of Kenney, Flannery and Hitz until his appointment to the bench.

He is survived by his widow, Mrs. Esther P. Hitz, and two sons, Frederick and William Hitz, jr. His home was at 1629 Van Buren street northwest.

The following attorneys have been named by George C. Gertman, secretary of the District Bar Association, to attend the funeral on behalf of the association;

10 Workmen Imperiled As Crane Collapses

Ten workmen at the Howard University's new chemistry building had a narrow escape from injury or death at 4 p. m. yesterday when a big hauling crane near them collapsed. Warned by the cracking which preceded the crash, they just had time enough to get out of danger.

The crane was used to lift stones and other heavy building materials to the top of the new chemistry hall under construction.

Miss Lutie Hart, Aid of Several Senators, Dies

Secretary for Shafroth, Cameron, Copeland in 22 Years Here.

Miss Lutie M. Hart, secretary to several United States Senators during the past 22 years, died unexpectedly at her home, 2101 New Hampshire avenue, yesterday. She was 61.

After leaving the service of Senator Shafroth, Miss Hart became secretary to Senator Cameron, of Arizona. For the last six years she had been an assistant secretary to Senator Copeland, of New York.

Miss Hart has no immediate relatives here, but has a sister, Mrs. Charles Perry, in Brush, Colo., and two brothers, Theodore and F. G. Hart, both in Los Angeles, Calif. No funeral arrangements have been made, but the body is at the Lee funeral home.

Teachers Urged To Seize Power By Ballot Box

Use of Franchise Called Effective Weapon to Force Reforms.

By the Associated Press.

Denver, July 3.—A bold challenge to the Nation's teachers to seize the balance of political power in America stirred the National Education Association convention today.

Simultaneously, educators set out to bring a speedy end to the perplexing "academic freedom" controversy.

Money—specifically the more than $800,000 in the National Education Association's permanent fund—struck the spark for a contentious battle in its representative assembly.

Use of the franchise was held up to the assembly by Dr. John K. Norton, Columbia University professor, as an effective instrument by which the 1,000,000 school teachers might force certain social and political changes.

"Political leaders should be brought to realize that teachers will not be satisfied with meaningless platitudes with which candidates for public office have clothed their votes," Norton declared.

"Teachers must demand to know the attitude of candidates toward child labor, development of social security programs, the modes of tax systems, and similar issues which go to the roots of a candidate's social philosophy."

He urged them to "organize increasingly and more effectively" to make their weight felt in national politics.

The question of academic freedom of expression which has embroiled several factional groups of the convention appeared headed for sharp debate on the convention floor tomorrow.

Dr. George T. Avery, of the Colorado State College, Fort Collins, chairman of the resolutions committee, said his group will return a "strong resolution" and denied that the question has been throttled or compromised. He refused to reveal the precise tone of the recommendation.

Another gulf was widened between school administrators and their teachers when the assembly for the second time rejected a proposal that the assembly instead of the board of trustees administer the $800,000 permanent association fund.

Hiram Walker

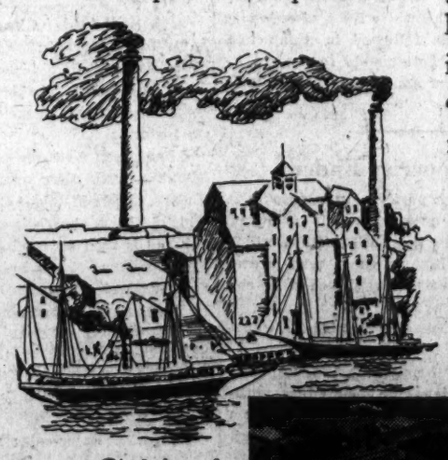
BORN IN AMERICA ON THE DAY AMERICA WAS BORN... July 4th

THE happiest fate that can befall a man is to be born an American and to be equal to an American's opportunities. And, if there is one day better than any other day to be born on, it would seem to be the Fourth of July.

Hiram Walker was born in Douglas, Massachusetts, forty years to the day after the Declaration of Independence was signed, born without the handicap of any special advantages.

We pay this tribute to his memory, not so much because he was a world-famous figure at 83, but because in these times it seems of special significance that he was a failure at 41.

His first business venture was a tannery that was wiped out by fire, and his second was a grocery business that was wrecked in the panic of the '50's. But he remained true to the American tradition that failures are the most useful ingredients of success.



Birthplace of "CANADIAN CLUB" ...the original Hiram Walker distillery, at Walkerville, Ontario, erected in 1857.

In 1857, operating with the faith and vision that survives limited resources, he laid the foundation of a distillery destined to become the largest independent business of its kind in the world.

A Life-long American

Hiram Walker, born an American, lived and died an American citizen. He couldn't forget he was born on the 4th of July... and when one year ago we completed the greatest monument to his memory, the opening ceremonies and the "old man's" birthday naturally came together.

For, the great seven million dollar Hiram Walker Distillery, at Peoria, Illinois, the largest plant of its kind in the world, was dedicated to the memory of the founder on the 118th anniversary of the founder... July 4th, 1934.

Now, it is true, as Emerson says, that a great institution is the lengthened shadow of one man. But it is also the composite shadow of many men, who carry on and perpetuate the heritage of one man's foresight and enterprise and thereby prove how well and true the founder built.

Today, the two great Hiram Walker organizations, one in America and one in Canada... one operating the largest distillery in the world at Peoria, the other conducting the original plant at Walkerville, Ontario, now grown to enormous proportions... testify to the devotion and loyalty of succeeding generations to the faith and principles of the founder.

New American Home... HIRAM WALKER'S DISTILLERY at Peoria, Illinois... dedicated on July 4th, 1934. It was built at a cost of over $7,000,000 and is the world's largest, most modern and best-equipped distillery.

No Message For Garcia.

It was unfortunate that the arrest of 17 American "investigators" as they arrived in Havana should have coincided with the enthusiastic address given at the University of Virginia by Sumner Welles, Assistant Secretary of State. Mr. Welles accused "a few so-called special correspondents" of "an astounding distortion of facts" concerning American-Cuban relations. But his own optimistic picture of economic rehabilitation and encouraging signs of political stability in the insular republic was somewhat overshadowed by the incarceration of the commission of the League of American Writers.

One does not need to sympathize with the views or the aims of this commission to see reflected in the harsh treatment accorded to it a very jittery state of official nerves. Cuba has a long road to travel before political and economic stability can be re-established. And if the unbiased findings of the Foreign Policy Association are to be relied upon, one important element in Cuban unrest is the belief that our Department of State continues to exercise considerable pressure in that country's internal affairs.

In spite of tremendous obstacles, President Mendieta is making a determined effort to rehabilitate Cuba. The manner in which he welcomed the investigation of the Foreign Policy Association indicates that he is not afraid to let the unvarnishd truth regarding Cuba's status be known. Nevertheless, he is apprehensive over the existing tension and loath to have it accentuated by a group of American writers far less responsible than the trained investigators of the F. P. A.

At the risk of appearing arbitrary, therefore, he has unceremoniously halted this uninvited probe into social and economic conditions. None who have any real respect for Cuba's sovereignty can criticize his action. Nor will any objective observer waste sympathy on the affront to the American writers who assigned themselves the gratuitous task of protecting Cuba against domination by American financial and industrial interests. Their first thought, on arrest, was to seek immunity on the ground that the vessel on which they had traveled to Havana was "American territory!"

A Monument To Jefferson.

The time is ripe for some one to write an amendment to the biblical epigram about a prophet being without honor only in his own country. It is a more common observation these days that a man is worthy of remembrance to the extent that his ideas have been thrown into the discard. If proof is required, witness the proposal of the National Capital Park and Planning Commission to erect a monument to Thomas Jefferson.

In this city abounding in memorials and national shrines it is strange that the contributions of Jefferson to political philosophy have never been fittingly commemorated in marble or bronze. The sage of Monticello is almost universally regarded as a symbol of American democracy. Since the Declaration of Independence was signed he has held place among the first rank of national heroes. Since the Louisiana Purchase and the Lewis and Clark expedition he has been intimately associated with what James Truslow Adams calls the American Dream. But the local monument builders, obsessed by the services of generals, have not been impressed.

There is something deeply ironical in the fact that a national planning body should begin studying a project to honor the patron saint of democracy at a time when his philosophy of government has been so emphatically repudiated by the reigning Administration. If this sage of the revolutionary period could appraise the current policies of the political party which he founded, he might choose not to be remembered. As Representative Huddleston said the other day: "I am an old-fashioned Thomas Jefferson Democrat and it is not my fault that what was considered liberal is not that now."

Former Gov. Ritchie told an audience last week that "through the prodigious expenditure of prodigious sums of public money, and through the conditions the Government imposes upon the States before they can receive these funds, American self-government is being destroyed before our very eyes." Had Jefferson been alive, those words might have come from his lips. Unless the park and planning commission wishes to play a practical joke it will be very careful not to place the proposed statue anywhere near the White House.

A Year-End Accounting.

The fiscal year closed on Sunday with a deficit of approximately $3,575,000,000, including $573,000,000 allocated to debt retirement. Expenditures fell $1,200,000,000 below estimates and revenues rose slightly above estimates, with the result that the deficit was considerably smaller than forecast. However, it was generally agreed when the President issued his budget message last January that he had set a high mark for spending that would not be reached within the remaining months of the fiscal year.

The outstanding fact is that the present Administration has incurred a deficit of more than $9,000,000,000 since it assumed office, as a result of which the public debt, exclusive of contingent liabilities, has risen to $28,700,000,000. Adding the contingent liabilities, guaranteed as to both principal and interest, total indebtedness amounts to approximately $32,700,000,000.

Faced by these figures and confronting the prospect of another deficit of several billions during the coming year, the sum that might be collected under the Administration's current tax proposals assumes relatively infinitesimal proportions. So far no suggestions have been offered by the Treasury concerning methods of covering recurrent deficits by effective taxation. Instead, there is a disquieting emphasis upon easy ways of reducing a debt which is being constantly augmented by emergency expenditures.

Secretary Morgenthau states, for instance, that the Government holds net assets of about $4,300,000,000 which may eventually be used to repay the public debt. As these assets are obligations of a very miscellaneous character, on which substantial losses will probably have to be taken, they do not afford a basis for careful budgetary planning. Moreover, as matters are going, the deficit of a single year would be almost sufficient to offset the effect of a one-time debt reduction secured by full realization on all these capital assets.

Another asset that could be utilized to pay off a portion of the Federal debt is the profit from devaluation of the dollar, of which $2,000,000,000 is now held in the exchange stabilization fund. Most of the remaining profit is being used to retire bonds against which national bank notes have been issued. According to reports, the Treasury plans eventually to apply this fund to debt reduction. This, too, would be an extraneous windfall, whereas the Treasury has vital need of recurrent revenues to offset deficits and provide for systematic repayment of the huge Government debt.

Furthermore, the utilization of these so-called "profits," obtained by arbitrary devaluation of the dollar, provide a most dubious resource from which to discharge debt obligations. Since the bullion itself can not be directly used unless or until the country returns to a system of free gold circulation, Government securities could only be bought by issuing paper currency against the bullion. Probably the procedure used would be issuance of Federal reserve notes, paid out against gold certificates deposited with the Federal Reserve Banks to the credit of the Government.

Payments of this sort have a highly inflationary effect, since they are made without a corresponding tax being imposed upon the public and ultimately add to the excess reserves of member banks. It is only necessary to consider what would happen if the dollar were further devalued, and more and more expropriatory "profits" piled up, to realize the dangerous implications of this proposal for transforming bonded debt into irredeemable note issues.

Suggestions of this sort only emphasize the need for a bona-fide tax plan that will really make an impression upon the deficit and put a stop to juggling with our budgetary accounts. In this connection the current Treasury statement provides a most illuminating postscript to the President's recent tax message.

Unglittering Generalities.

There is something subtly insidious about generalizations and statistics ensuing from research. Dehumanization to the point of being made to feel simply like the fifty millionth guinea pig is no cure for self-consciousness. To the contrary, it tends to make the dissected uncomfortable, wary and resentful. Yet, in spite of this, publishers and their authors continue to harass a long-suffering public by pigeonholing modes, morales and manners in blurbs, advertisements and titles. Especially the choice of titles must be called to an accounting.

Two herd-titles that come to mind are "Gentlemen Prefer Blondes" and "The Postman Always Rings Twice." The former is a perfect example of painful generalization which made the situation some years ago extremely embarrassing for gentlemen, for blondes and for brunettes. The second one decidedly puts the poor mail carrier on the spot. If he rings but once, he doubtless feels that he is not living up to what is expected of him. If he rings twice, he has a sneaking idea that he is weakly yielding to suggestive coercion. Three rings, in view of his limitations as prescribed by a work of literature, seem sheer defiance. And, as a matter of realism, most postmen don't ring at all.

But perhaps the classification which comes nearest to getting nowhere at all is the one which publishers are pleased to specify as the "general reader." What, if anything, does that mean? In a recent study, sponsored by the American Library Association, it is asserted that "the general reader can not be identified in terms of years, occupational interests, or even education." Yet to please this mythical portion of the population, the study lists 289 factors necessary to making reading matter more readable.

Why not dispense with all hoity-toity generalizations such as "features of organization," "style of expression and presentation," "mechanical features," and "content" and get down to a few that will really tend to make reading more enjoyable? One improvement would be a magazine with stories short enough to be finished in one sitting at the doctor's office. Another would be a different kind of publisher's blurb which did not spoil the fun of reading the book by outlining its plot and denouement on the cover. Still a third suggestion is that more thought be concentrated on author and less on reader. For if publishers really want to attract the queer, fickle, two-footed homo sapiens in order to study its unpredictable reading tastes, the best bait is good writing. There, at least, is one point which the compilers of this recent study may be sure applies to all so-called "general readers."

The Lobby Investigation.

Lobbying is a legitimate activity when it is confined to dissemination of relevant information and presentation of pertinent arguments for or against a particular legislative proposal. It becomes a weapon of coercion inimical to the orderly conduct of representative government when facts and arguments are driven home by threats of reprisals should a legislator prove obdurate.

Congress has had its fill of the latter type of lobbyist pressure during the fight over the public utility bill. Assertions that spokesmen for the Administration have rivaled private lobbyists in trying to whip their forces into line have led to the passage of resolutions ordering investigations into all charges "of the exercise of undue influence" on members. That is as it should be. A legislative body driven by bureaucratic dispensers of patronage may not seem quite as venal as one that succumbs to the urgings of private interests, but it as clearly forfeits the right to be regarded as a self-respecting independent legislative agency.

That fact has been recognized in the request for a two-way inquiry that will expose those who have attempted to substitute pressure for arguments, regardless of whom they represent. If spokesmen for Administration measures have overstepped the bounds of decency and decorum in trying to obtain support for certain measures, responsible Government officials should be the first to welcome an investigation that would suppress such activities in future. For the mere suggestion that the allocation of relief funds may depend upon how a certain Congressman votes on a particular measure tends to discredit the entire work-relief administration.

Executive heads of Government agencies should applaud the extirpation of practices which nullify assurances that the vast discretionary spending powers of the Government will not be used for ulterior ends. However conscientious public officials may be, it is hard to avoid the appearance of subjection to improper influences, and their actions will often be suspect. They can not afford to risk the additional hazards created by an irresponsible Government lobby.

Private lobbyists who seek by direct or indirect bribes to buy votes are in some respects less dangerous enemies of representative government than those who use the prestige of the Administration, and the power conferred by its control over public funds, to influence legislation. The former can be more easily repelled by honest men than the latter. The public can be more readily convinced of the nefarious character of illegitimate private lobbying, and the lobbyists themselves are less likely to deceive themselves into believing that they are performing a real service.

For all these reasons, it is most gratifying that both houses are eager to take cognizance of the lobbying activities that have interfered with free legislative processes in the case of the holding company bill. By turning the white light of publicity upon the methods followed in this case, Congress will be better able to protect itself against further assaults on its integrity and independence.

The Hypocrisy Ended.

It is no longer possible to prosecute a local restaurant proprietor for allowing his patrons to see the bottles from which are poured the liquors they may order. President Roosevelt has signed the so-called "hidden bar bill," thus ending a condition in the District that had few defenders and less excuse for being.

The law which the present one supplants sprang from the laudable desire that nothing reminiscent of the old-time barroom should be allowed in the National Capital. With this none had any reasonable quarrel. But in trying to dodge one evil the procedure chosen created others, as not infrequently happens.

The new law makes it possible for patrons to know what they are receiving in the way of liquor, or garnishings such as decorate the martini or the fruit-festooned Washingtonian idea of a mint julep. It ends the menace of the nimble olive, which was sometimes reliably accused of jumping from glass to glass. While there is nothing in the law to make open serving of drinks mandatory, the question being left up to the proprietor and the demands of his customers, the revision achieved is certainly desirable from every viewpoint.

It is a pity that the United States Supreme Court can not abolish the patronage system by declaring it unconstitutional. There's a sacred American institution for you, a representative institution, the living tissue of our democracy.—Springfield Republican.

Buses And The Oil Supply.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

I know he risks brickbats and abuse, who presumes to defend the horse-and-buggy-age street car against the bus, on the theory that the saps don't know what's good for them and must have it jammed down their throats while not looking. The bus lover is moved to reprisal as hot as the exhaust fumes of the built-in engines.

I'm not indicting buses. I admit their greater speed and mobility, comfort when new (but depreciation is rapid) freedom from tie-ups, desirability for express hauls, as pioneer service to new territory. But for the almost straight heavily traveled line the street car has all the votes.

Take the case against the bus few have touched upon—the oil situation and unalterable facts in regard to crude oil reserves. My own experience from tool dresser to lease owner and independent operator in the midcontinent is beside the point. True, raising the proration lid would mean an oversupply for a time, hastening the day of reckoning. I don't predict horses tomorrow, but do predict this generation, not the next, will do the worrying.

But, shucks, if that time ever comes, says the layman, scientists and chemists will put out a substitute better and cheaper. The sad part of it is this is not a pipe dream, any more than a prediction of 20,000,000 cars was when 100,000 chugged through the dust. After all, the profit motive, not love of the public, is behind the change.

A Still Older Church.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

The letters about old churches are very interesting. The letters have a freshness that awakens interest in history.

I have been watching for a letter about a still older church — St. Luke's, in Isle of Wight County, Va. This old brick church is still standing and is used occasionally by the Episcopalians. It was built in 1633. Gen. Gilbert Grosvenor, president of the National Geographic Society, most graciously furnished me with complete data about this, the oldest Protestant church in the United States; but as I am away from my home in Oxford, Ga., this matter is not available.

I made a water-color sketch of this church when a boy 10 years old, visiting with my father the scenes of his boyhood. The sketch went up in flames along with our home.

Red Cross Salaries.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

Since the restoration of the Government clerks' salaries one hears this question asked over and over again —"Why are not the salary 'cuts' of the Red Cross employes restored?" Now that food, clothing and rents are going up and up, this is a very serious problem.

The "pension question" is not as interesting to the majority of the Red Cross workers as the "restoration question," but if the Red Cross wants to be truly magnanimous, why not give the employes both? Charity begins at home.

Cheap Bus Fuel?

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

Please allow just a few words from another one of those who is sensitive to fumes from motor buses. Your correspondent in The Post of July 2 is correct about the fumes from the Madison avenue buses in New York City. It holds equally good for most of the bus lines in Queensboro, Long Island, just across the East River.

I am not an expert in motor fuels but I have a sneaking suspicion that these buses which generate the obnoxious fumes are not being run by gasoline at all, but are using a cheap grade of distillate. Fumes from this distillate are so obnoxious that I have known cases where families moved from apartments which were perfectly satisfactory in every other respect, just to escape the fumes.

It seems possible that the city authorities might be able to prevent the use of this cheap fuel which is is probably the cause of the trouble. The franchise which a bus line gets from a city should be so drawn up as to protect the citizens from this kind of a nuisance.

Netherlands Titles.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

Every now and then I am pained at the unpardonable inaccuracies of American news agencies, both here and abroad, when they refer to a Netherlander in the news as "Herr" or "Frau" or "Fraulein."

First, it is as wrong as it would be to refer to Monsieur Stalin or Signor Hitler or Mademoiselle Anne Morgan.

If it is necessary or desired to attach a handle to the name of a Netherlander, it should be Mijnheer or Mevrouw or Mejuffrouw, respectively. This, or the plain English—Mr., Mrs., or Miss.

It is, however, not merely a matter of accuracy to use the proper national designation, but also, in most cases, a question of fairness, especially when it concerns a name in the diplomatic, financial or commercial news.

We all know the deplorable ignorance of the general public in matters of geography and foreign conditions in general. It is bad enough to mistake, as is being done, Dutch for German, which, to the writer's personal knowledge, has frequently hurt the import trade from the Netherlands among certain classes of the American population. It is, however, infinitely worse to create the impression that the Netherlands premier, Hendrik Colijn, or the president of the Bank of International Settlements, Dr. Trip, or the president of the International Chamber of Commerce, Dr. van Vlissingen, when they are individually referred to as "Herr," sleeping under one blanket with, respectively, Herr Hitler, Herr Schacht or Herr Goering.

On Suability.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

In reference to the President's "Gold Message," I would call attention to the fact that either under express constitutional guaranties or controlling jurisprudence, practically every civil law country in the modern world is suable in its own courts, administrative or judicial. In Great Britain, the monarchical principle still obtains, the Crown may not be sued, although petition of right lies; but Crown officers are amenable to suit for acts done in their official capacities. The Privy Council ("Zamora" case) refused to presume that the Crown intended infraction of principles of universal acceptance and, finding it in fact, insisted upon indemnification or restitution.

John Marshall declared: The laws ought not to be so construed as to produce unreasonable results or "infract common principles and usages of nations or the general doctrines of national law, particularly where such legislation is permanent and not temporary" (Talbot vs. Seaman, 1 Cr. 1807, 1, 43). He affirmatively imposed constructions consistent with "those principles which we believe, and which it is our duty to believe, the legislature will always hold sacred" (supra, 44). He refused to give an act of Congress a construction anomalous "in a government of laws and principles, furnished with a department whose appropriate duty is to decide questions of right not only between individuals, but between the government and individuals" (U. S. vs. Nourse, 9 Peters U. S., 1835, 528).

If the rights retained to all the people be within the protection of the "superintending judicial authority" of the Nation, and thus secure from action of the Federal Government transcending its trust as well as from the adverse influence of reserved State power, the extension of judicial power to controversies in which the United States may be a party is of great significance. No construction of the Constitution is to be given it which would destroy important objects for which a power under the Constitution was given (Marshall; Mayor vs. De Armas; 9 Peters, U. S. 1835, 233, 234; Cohens vs. Virginia, 6 Wheat., U. S., 1821, 264, 395), no negative or exclusive sense which would nullify the purpose of the Constitution.

JOSEPH WHITLA STINSON.

Typographical Error.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

I note your article in Sunday's Post, with reference to the first sailing of the Cunard Line July 4, 1840, in which you cite the Britannic. In this I respectfully correct you as it was the Britannia, as Cunard ship names (with the exception of the Oregon, bought from the Guoin Line and lost in March, 1886), all end in "ia." The sister ships of the Britannia were the Caledonia, Columbia and Arcadia.

This new ship to come out next year, I understand, was to be called Victoria, the writer having sent in the name Philadelphia as Mr. Samuel Cunard was born in Philadelphia, but brought up in Halifax, and in 1833 was interested in the Royal William, the first steamer to cross the western ocean from America, under steam for the entire voyage. It is also my understanding the line has never lost a passenger, with the exception of two having been washed overboard about 1911, from either the Campania or Lucania. The Lusitania, of course, was considered a war loss.

"In a Mess"—Or Two.

Post Office, Thursday.

THE little married woman who lives in the lodgings under ours uses the 'phone every morning at just that moment when we want to call the boss and tell him we're sorry to have to be late, but the taxi-cab had a collision. That is, she begins at just that moment—she keeps on until we have forgotten what we wanted to telephone about.

About what she wants to telephone we have long been curious. Unfortunately, our manners forbid eavesdropping. So the other day, we induced our neighbor the stenographer to listen over the banister—and record.

We submit her record.

"I want to talk to Mr. Browne, please . . . What? . . . Mr. Browne with an 'e,' yes . . . What? Oh, I didn't know there were. It's not a common name with an 'e,' is it? . . . Well, Mr. Phil Browne, then. You see, he asked us——

"Oh, is that you, Phil? I thought that other fellow was still on the 'phone. Who was he? He has a nice voice . . .

"Yes, this is Louise. Say, Phil, my hair's a mess. I'm afraid I can't make that, this afternoon: my hair's a mess . . . A mess. It's awful . . .

"To do with it? Why, how can I go if my hair's a mess? And it is: it's a mess. You ought to see it . . .

"At the hairdresser's, of course—

"But I couldn't. I did try. Only, he had an appointment every minute. He's awfully popular: the most wonderful setting fingers. So I had to make it today, because my hair's a mess, and I couldn't let it go any longer than today, and four was the only time he had today . . .

"Oh, no; you don't understand about such things, Phil. My hair's a mess, and he's the only one to go to in town. I wouldn't think of going to anyone else . . .

"I am: I'm awfully sorry; but really, Phil, if you could see my hair! It's a mess . . .

"No, I just couldn't; honestly, I couldn't . . . I'd love to—really I would. I'm all broken up about it, but my hair's——

"Five? It takes him all of an hour, always, he's so conscientious, and afterwards it has to dry; and the mess my hair's in now, if he can get through in an hour and a half . . .

"No, Phil, I simply couldn't. You always have to wait there, even if you get there on time . . .

"But I did: I washed it myself. I wouldn't be that extravagant! And that's partly why it's in such a mess . . . No, no, NO! You're crazy. All he does is set it . . . Phil, it's perfectly awful: it's a mess! . . .

"Well, you can call Bill if you want to, but my hair's——

"Oh, hello, dear! Listen, Bill: Right after you left the house I remembered I forgot about having my hair set. It's a mess, and I've got to have it set this afternoon. Here it is Saturday and tomorrow's Sunday, and it's a perfect mess . . .

* * *

"Don't talk that way! You wouldn't want me to look like Alice, would you? . . . Then Phil must be blind. She's——

"I don't care: she is. And tomorrow's Sunday, and . . .

"Well, I know, but . . .

"But my hair's a mess, Bill! . . .

"Oh, that would make it too late—the drive out and everything . . .

"Well, but he mightn't get through even by then, it's such a mess . . .

"Yes, of course, if I could put it off, it'd be nicer for the dance Tuesday. But, O, Bill, it's just a mess. It's a perfect mess! . . .

"Mrs. Browne, please . . .

"Oh-h-h, Alice, I didn't recognize your voice. I think it's a shame for anybody with a voice like you've got to talk over the 'phone: it always kind of hardens a voice, the phone does, don't you think it does? . . .

"Listen, Alice, my hair's a mess. And I have to have it set this afternoon. And you know how it is at Alphonse's. So all the appointment I could make yesterday was four today, and there were our husbands going to be waiting to bring me out to your place. So what could I do? I simply had to 'phone Phil my hair was a mess, and he wouldn't believe a word of it. And I told Bill—he left the house before I got up, so he was down there at the office with Phil by then—so Phil got Bill to the 'phone, and I told him, I said: 'Bill, my hair's a mess.' Well, you know what men are. I told him your hair was always just right because it has that natural wave, so I wouldn't think of coming out to your place when my hair was a regular mess. But he simply wouldn't hear I shouldn't, so I guess I've got to—if you don't mind my hair. I don't know what you'll think. My hair's a mess. It's a regular mess, dear. It's—honestly, it's just a mess!

Suspended in Mid-Air.

If you have ever read any of those circus romances or tragedies you can appreciate the h t interest quality of what is happening right here in our midst. You know, the stories entitled "Drama Under the Big Tent" or "Hate Breaks Out on the Trapeze." Then there is that story of the acrobat who wanted to get rid of his wife so he could marry the blonde bareback rider. When he was supposed to swing out to catch his agile mate as she left the swinging bar he didn't do it. That left her in a most embarrassing position, indeed. Students have called it about one of the meanest tricks a man can play on his wife or vice versa.

Well, it would seem that a very similar trick has been played on Mr. Frank Walker. A layer of the alley-oop pyramid which was set up to handle the $4,000,000,000 works program has by degrees moved right out from under him, and, so help me goodness, left him suspended in mid-air. Through some strange operation of gravity he doesn't fall to the ground. He just stands there in mid-air not resting on a thing, at least, anything that is apparent to the naked eye.

• • • •

So many things have happened since the structure to administer the works program was set up that most people have forgotten how it looked. There was the first layer, course, consisting, as nearly as e can recall, of an advisory coun- il or something. Then as these gentlemen stood with their feet firmly on the ground and with their arms around one another, Messrs. Ickes and Hopkins were swung up on their shoulders with a loud alley-oop. There came then on the shoulders of these two men an allotment board and finally at the very top of the pyramid like a tatue of Liberty or something, was rank Walker.

Well, sir, you should see the thing now. It takes its place along with the Leaning Tower of Pisa as ne of the seven wonders of the orld. Tourists gaze upon it in wonder and are inclined to think it is a trick. "I'll give you my word of honor it isn't," the guides insist, mopping their brows. "Don't ask me to explain it, but there it is."

It seems that Harry Hopkins was the first to leave the structure. Just how he could get out of the wedge is something somebody else will have to explain, but out he eased nevertheless, leaving Ickes there as the only support between the base and the allotment board and Frank. Not only did Harry pull out but he took the $4,000,000,000 with him. It was too much for Ickes to stand. He shifted from one foot to the other to the great discomfort, as one may imagine, of those of the superstructure. They kept yelling down to him "For gawd's sake stand still down there."

What Ickes was really doing all the time, of course, was trying to get out of the pyramid himself. Then one day he said he understood politicians just as well as Harry Hopkins and stepped out of the piece. Thus we have the base, the advisory council, with one gap through the desertion of Mr. Julius Woods, and suspended above it resting on not a thing, the allotment board and Frank. At first I said Frank was resting on nothing. Of course, he is resting on the allotment board, but there is nothing visible to the eye that is holding up the allotment board. Why it doesn't come crashing down on top of the greatly weakened advisory council is what defies the average mind.

• • • •

The impression is that if Frank could get down, if someone would put a step ladder up to him, he would again go home. But as it is he can't go up and he can't go down. He's just fixed there.

A lot of people think there is an invisible string holding Frank up, but there isn't. A knife has frequently been passed over his head by curious persons and you know if there was a string there it would be cut in two.

No, the best guess is that Mr. Roosevelt has a definite purpose in keeping Frank in the position he is in. Little did he realize what Mr. Roosevelt had in mind when he insisted he really had a job for him this time.

You see, everybody thought Mr. Roosevelt was a magician when he was pulling money out of the air. But now the talk of additional taxes is causing people to question whether he really is. So he keeps Frank suspended there in the air for all to see.

Snake Man Of The Bronx

Dr. Ditmars Makes Pets Of Snakes, Believing Them To Have Capacity Of Adjusting Themselves To Humans, Who Must Understand Their Make-ups; Fear Of Falling Said To Be Characteristic.

By Ralph E. Renaud.

Special Correspondence of The Post.

EVER since that famous early Garden of Eden episode in the shade of the old apple tree, mankind has been fascinated by snakes. The man who probably knows more about snakes and snake ways than anybody in the world lives in New York and has just celebrated his sixtieth birthday. He is Dr. Raymond L. Ditmars, of course, curator of the Bronx Zoo.

Dr. Ditmars isn't afraid of snakes. In fact he is exceedingly fond of them and his favorite pets, of which he has about a hundred, are the king snakes. The secret of his success with the reptiles is that he thinks they have a capacity for adjusting themselves to human beings and that he knows what they, themselves, are afraid of.

Most snakes, for example, are terribly fearful of falling. Naturally, when they are on the ground they haven't far to go, but when they are at a height they are well aware that they don't possess four spring feet, like a cat, to fall on. The other day, at the zoo, some of the keepers, under Dr. Ditmars' direction, were busy unpacking a case full of serpents just shipped from the tropics.

Among them was the fer-de-lance, that death-dealing little streak which lurks in the Central American jungle. But it was all the same to the keepers. The box might have contained nothing but garter snakes. They merely thrust a steel hook into the squirming mass and stirred it around a bit. Quickly a snake attached itself to the hook (it happened to be a fer-de-lance) and was carried within six inches of Dr. Ditmars before being thrust into its permanent, glass-sided home. A visitor expressed astonishment at the casual way in which the deadly arrivals were handled.

"It's all right," said Dr. Ditmars. "The snake won't do anything. He's too much worried about his own position. He's afraid, if he gets into position to strike, he'll fall off the hook. So he simply won't let go."

• • • •

SPEAKING of a casual attitude toward snakes, Dr. Ditmars recalls the woman, not far from New York, who wrote to him seeking his advice on a household problem of rattlers and copperheads which had developed at her place. The snakes invaded her home and made themselves a nuisance. The rattlers didn't bother her much, both because they were easily distinguishable and because they issued a warning. But the copperheads blended into the design of the carpet in her living room and really caused her some concern. She didn't want to tread on one.

Dr. Ditmars had quite a correspondence with the lady. He concluded that her house must have been built directly over an old snake pit. Snakes won't leave their old home. They have been known to stay in the same place for at least 30 years, even after civilization has invaded their precincts. Their bodies actually wear down the surface of the rocks. The herpatologist knew that traps and poison would be useless, as the snakes would breed too fast. He suggested that the lady have her grounds and foundation thoroughly cleared, but she didn't want to go to that expense. His final suggestion was that she get a new carpet for her living room, something with a design on which copperheads would show up plainly.

Several years ago Dr. Ditmars wrote a book called "Snakes of the World," which is supposed to contain more information on the squirmy family than was ever brought together before. It will be a surprise to many to learn his opinion that the New York area is inhabited by snakes in more abundance than any similar area in the world. In fact, many snakes are to be found right on Manhattan Island even now and a little north of the city, on an old reservoir site, there are thousands of them. These, however, are harmless, even beneficent reptiles. You have to go farther out to meet the triangular headed ones with poison glands.

• • • •

DR. DITMARS ridicules many snake myths, especially the one about mother snakes swallowing their young when they are in danger. He has watched snakes pretty carefully all his life and has never seen this happen. Nor has he ever met anyone who has seen it happen. Indeed he suspects the mother serpent has very little maternal feeling. "The young may incidentally linger near the mother after they are born," he says. "But the only reason for the contact appears to be the favorable nature of the place, nearby shelters for both."

Dr. Ditmars also believes that the size of serpents, like Mark Twain's death, is much exaggerated. He said that the four largest snakes of which there is any record are the regal python of eastern India and Malaysia, which grows to a length of 33 feet, the South American anaconda, which sometimes attains a length of 25 feet, the Indian Rock python (Rudyard Kipling's and Mowgli's Kaa), and the African rock python, which is only 20 feet long. Still, 33 feet is a pretty fair stretch, even for a snake. The largest snake the Bronx Zoo ever had was a regal python, 24 feet long. It took quite a crew of men to unwind him so he could be measured.

The proportion of venomous snakes is likewise much exaggerated, according to Dr. Ditmars. There are about 2,000 kinds of snakes on our globe, only about one-eighth of them are poisonous, and only about half of this eighth are deadly to man. It is a mistake, too, to imagine the poisonous varieties are always easy to distinguish. Some of those with the most fatal habits look as mild as milk. But, if all goes well with science, even the venom of snakes may prove a boon to mankind, except in India, where religion gives them an undeserved sanctity. The treatment of disease by snake venom which, in minute doses, controls the action of the heart, is making progress all the while.

• • • •

SNAKES are not Dr. Ditmars' only hobby. He is a man of hobbies, and chief among them is making moving pictures of the great panorama of animal life. In fact, he cherishes a grandiose design of presenting the entire range of life, from the insect up to man, on the screen. He has been taking movies of animal and insect life for 25 years and at his home in Scarsdale has a photographic studio which is a marvel of adaptation to the subjects he studies. Instead of having movable cameras, for example, he has a movable stage, and in order to learn all there was to know about the focusing of spot lights he studied for quite a period with a stage electrician. His movie researches have had a remarkable success on Broadway and his "Living Book of Nature" ran for 30 weeks at one of the bigger theaters.

At first the movie people weren't interested in his productions. They complained that his pictures had neither love interest nor comedy. Dr. Ditmars went home, put pith shoes on a fly, rigged a tree-toad on a twisted string to encourage him into acrobatics, and produced a jungle circus of seven episodes which was a panic. His last movie enterprise was picturing the existence of the vampire bat, that strange blood-sucking mammal which attacks the sleeper with teeth so sharp that he is not even wakened.

But perhaps Dr. Ditmars' strangest experience was not with a snake, an animal or an insect but with a man. This was with John Cromartie, 27 years old, who had an ambition to enter the zoo as a specimen. It was Mr. Cromartie's contention that the zoo was not complete without an example of homo sapiens in a cage—a nice pleasant cage, of course, with a table to work at and a well-stocked book case. For a small consideration Mr. Cromartie was willing to enter the cage and exhibit himself. But Dr. Ditmars tactfully discouraged him, admitting that he was homo, all right, but not quite sufficiently sapiens.

Italy Prepares Fire For Ethiopian's Feet

Rome, July 3 (AP).—Based upon the fact that most Ethiopian soldiers go barefooted, the Italian army has prepared a type of chemical which, sprinkled on the ground, will burn through even shoe leather.

The chemical can be sprinkled by tanks.

During a trial of the substance near Rome, a photographer inadvertently started to walk across ground sprinkled with the chemical. An officer grabbed him and rushed him to a watering trough. The soles of his shoes were burned away.

21 Knights of Bath Installed in Britain

London, July 3 (AP).—The ancient ceermony of installing Knights of the Bath was performed today in the Henry VII Chapel of Westminster Abbey at the hands of the Duke of Connaught, 85-year-old uncle of King George and great master of the Order of the Bath.

Twenty-one new knights were installed in the third such ceremony in the past 100 years. The rites today were symbolic of the old days when neophites "satt in the bath all nakyd except for a lynnen breech."

Bookworm Questions.

FOR readers who pride themselves on their knowledge of books and authors, and who like to show their prowess now and again, your correspondent has compiled a little series of questions. There's no use in calling it an intelligence test—if you happen to know who wrote "The Square Egg," well and good; but if you don't no amount of intelligence will help. Consider it merely a little game to play with yourself, or against your wife or husband. Some of the questions seem quite easy, and others very tricky indeed. But try them yourself. The answers will appear in this space tomorrow.

Headsman Claims 2 More Germans

Pair Die in Drive to Keep Military Secrets.

By the Associated Press.

Berlin, July 3.—Two more Germans too eager to learn or too willing to divulge Germany's military secrets died under the headsman's ax today, bringing to 17 the number of persons executed or sentenced for espionage during recent months.

Heads to roll today were those of Egon Bresz, 28, convicted of trying to procure armaments secrets, and Bruno Hindemann, 63, convicted of betraying military information.

Wilhelm Battesch, 48, who was tried with them in the dread people's court, was sentenced to life imprisonment for revealing military information.

Semi-official quarters disclosed that several more persons were awaiting trial, and little hope was held that mercy would be given them in view of the Reich's determination to keep its rearmament secrets.

Japan Completes U-Boat Fleet.

Kure, Japan, July 3 (AP).—The Japanese navy's 1-7, 1,900 tons of the latest word in submarine building, was launched today at the Kure navy base. It is the seventh and last of a class of far-cruising submarines, said to be capable of crossing the Pacific and returning without refueling.

Cuba Deports 17 Americans As 'Agitators'

Liberal Writers Released From Detention Camp, Placed on Ship.

By the Associated Press.

Havana, July 3. — Seventeen American liberals detained when they arrived in Cuba last night to investigate social and political conditions here were informed late today they would be deported tonight.

United States Consul Donald Edgar told Clifford Odets, left-wing playwright and leader of the commission, the group would be placed aboard the Ward liner Oriente, the boat aboard which they arrived, about 7:30 p. m. The Oriente was scheduled to sail for New York at 8 p. m.

Two New York school teachers whose friendship with members of the commission led to their detention will be held here pending further investigation of their status. The two are Mamie Keselinko and Regina Lazar. They have round trip tickets to Mexico City.

Admittance Refused.

It was learned on unimpeachable authority that the government decided not to permit the Americans to enter Cuba either as immigrants or tourists, basing its action on the fact that two Cubans already have filed denunciations with the immigration department charging them with attempting to enter Cuba "to disturb peace."

Members of the "investigating commission" have been held since their arrival last night at the Tiscornia detention camp across the bay from Havana. The United States consulate communicated with them there today.

Headed by Odets, whose "waiting for Lefty" attained considerable success on the New York stage and elsewhere, the 17 Americans, styling themselves "the commission to investigate social and labor conditions" in Cuba, said they planned to look into the "complete destruction of civil liberties" here.

Agitation Feared.

Although they insisted their report would be entirely impartial and designed primarily to thwart "the domination of Cuba by American financial and industrial interests," the government apparently took the view that the commission's object was agitation instead of investigation.

Consequently the 17 were held aboard the Oriente for several hours after its arrival, later to be removed to the detention camp. Several hundred police guarding the dock kept back local liberals who wanted to receive the visitors, allowing only police, government officials and newspapermen to board the ship.

Memorial Day In France

By

William Lyon Phelps

ANY American in Paris, who wishes to know what is going on over here, will do well to call on the American Bernhard Ragner, at the Hotel Continental. Mr. Ragner is an American who has had an office in this hotel for years, and is particularly kind to his travelling fellow-countrymen, and willing to share some of his apparently limitless information. He was a sergeant in the Eightieth Division of the A. E. F. during the World War; and among Americans in Paris, May 30 is even a greater day of commemoration than it is in many parts of the United States.

Mr. Ragner has supplied me with interesting figures. There are 30,892 American soldiers buried in French soil.

• • • •

Our seven or eight military cemeteries in Europe are the finest and best maintained of all. Gen. Pershing arrived in France two days before May 30, in order to preside at the annual memorial exercises; for some notion of their importance may be obtained from the fact that about 100,000 poppies, more than 30,000 palm wreaths, and the same number of French and American flags, provided by the American Overseas Memorial Day Association, will be used to decorate the graves of the American dead.

Individual graves—that of Quentin Roosevelt, for example—are decorated both by Americans and French citizens; the mayor of the nearest community usually attends.

Then there is in France the Battle Monuments Commission, which by no means confines its activities to May 30. Practically every day in the year, often on the anniversary of the death of an individual soldier, flowers are placed on his grave. Easter Day, Armistice Day, and Christmas are devoted to these pious acts of commemoration.

• • • •

A flower fund, with its offices in the American Embassy, has been established, so that any grave may be decorated with natural flowers, at a request from America. A bouquet costs 25 francs, a wreath 50, and the Flower Commission will furnish on request a photograph of the grave.

Mrs. Charles H. Sherrill, wife of our former American Ambassador to Turkey, has restored a beautiful thirteenth century church near Paris, to the great delight of the inhabitants of that town. And there, commemorative exercises are held on the thirtieth day of May.

I was in the American Church on the last Sunday in May. The American pastor, the Rev. Clayton Williams, gave out the notices for the various celebrations for Memorial Day. With him, and with Mr. R. L. Humber, a graduate of Wake Forest College in North Carolina, and a former Rhodes Scholar at Oxford, I visited the impressive memorial erected near St. Cloud over the graves of the Americans of the Esquadrille Lafayette.

Haile Selassie Disavows Desire For War in His Version of Row

But Emperor Says Ethiopia Will Defend Independence To Last Ditch Against Italian Protectorate; Appeals to World Public Opinion.

Editor's Note—Emperor Haile Selassie of Ethiopia says he wants no war with Italy—but Ethiopia will defend herself to the last bitter ditch, confident of victory in the end, if war comes. He outlines his firm stand against any sort of concession to Benito Mussolini in the following article.

Copyright, 1935, by the Associated Press.

By Halie Selassie I,

Emperor of Ethiopia.

Addis Ababa, July 3.—I have been asked if I believe in war as the solution of the Italo-Ethiopian conflict. My answer is:

Ethiopia never has desired war nor desires war now, because war destroys progress.

The present conflict, for which Italy used as a pretext the Ualual incident (a border clash late last year in which 30 Italians and 110 Ethiopians were reported to have been killed), is in no wise chargeable to Ethiopia because it is established by diplomatic documents that that since August last Italy has been considerably arming her colonies of Eritrea and Somaliland, necessitating a declaration by the Ethiopian charge d'affaires in Rome denying Ethiopian intentions of aggression, which pretext Italy used to justify her increased armaments.

Expulsion From League.

In spite of our firm resolution to avoid war, we shall accomplish our duty in the eventuality of war.

It has been suggested that Ethiopia might appeal to other powers, mainly the United States, before war or after its declaration, for assistance. The Italio-Ethiopian conflict has been brought before international public opinion through the League of Nations, and we hope sincerely that the American press will expose clearly to the American people our right to liberty and independence.

I learn that press reports in some parts of the world say Mussolini told (Capt. Anthony) Eden (British secretary for League of Nations affairs), that Italy's minimum demands were the expulsion of Ethiopia from the league and an armed (Italian) protectorate over Ethiopia.

It is asked: Will Ethiopia accept an Italian protectorate or mandate? Only that country which fails to accomplish its duty may be expelled from the league. Ethiopia has always respected all its international obligations. The personal opinion of a chief of state, however powerful, can not disturb us. Only the league, not Italy, can decide as to the exclusion of Ethiopia.

Queried on Concessions.

Again, it has been asked whether Ethiopia would accept any protectorate or mandate other than Italian, probably British.

My reply is: Ethiopia is independent and will remain so. It refuses to consider the loss of its independence. As long as arbitration is under way and, in case of the failure thereof, as long as the council of the league has not reached a decision, Ethiopia, while keeping prepared to defend itself against all eventualities, will not proceed with general mobilization.

On behalf of the American people, I have been asked what concessions I am prepared to make to avoid armed conflict.

To avoid war the league arbitrators have been regularly instructed by us. We will not consider any concessions of a political or territorial nature. At the same time we will not accept any limitation of our sovereignty or independence.

Collaboration with Italy can be considered after peaceful settlement of the present conflict.

In the present circumstances, public opinion must consider that it is not Ethiopia alone that is threatened, but that with it is menaced the whole system of peaceful settlement of international disputes which has been so laboriously worked out since the World War.

Austria Moves To ReturnLand To Hapsburgs

Cabinet Vote to Give Back Vast Holdings Hints Step to Monarchy.

By the Associated Press.

Vienna, July 3.—The Austrian government tonight took another step toward restoration of the old monarchy by voting to return the vast properties of the Hapsburgs, held by the state since that dynasty was overhrown.

To become effective, the cabinet's action must be approved by the Federal Diet, which meets July 9 to consider the question.

The decision strengthened the monarchists' belief that Archduke Otto, youthful pretender to the Austrian throne, will be crowned in Vienna soon.

Consent of the Diet to restore the expropriated castles, land and business properties to the house of Hapsburg was regarded as certain, for the Diet almost invariably rubber-stamps actions of the cabinet.

Royal properties confiscated in 1919 included over a dozen castles, museums, theaters, business properties, forests, farms and even Vienna's closest approach to Coney Island, the "Prater." While the cabinet voted to repeal most of the confiscation law, it specified that museums and theaters should remain the property of the state.

If the action becomes final it will make the 22-year-old Otto—recently described by friends as too poor to buy a riding horse—extremely wealthy.

Former King of Greece Haled to Divorce Court

By the United Press.

Athens, July 3.—Former King George of Greece today was ordered to appear in the Bucharest divorce court Saturday as the Greek government sent to Parliament a draft decree ordering a plebiscite to determine whether he should regain his throne.

The Bucharest official gazette published this summons requiring King George's appearance to answer the divorce petition of former Queen Elizabeth. George is in London, where he is likely to remain.

The government's decree would provide for a plebiscite to decide whether Greeks desire to restore the dynasty with male primogeniture. It provides the president would fix a date for the plebiscite and order what percentage of votes would be required to change the regime.

Observers consider Britain has accepted the French demand for negotiation of a military air limitation treaty and has undertaken to parallel other schemes.

By the Associated Press.

Addis Ababa, July 3.—Unofficial reports received here today said there were heavy losses on both sides in a battle between Italian and Ethiopian forces, but details and confirmation were lacking.

The frontier of Eritrea, scene of previous incidents, was said to be where the fighting occurred.

Another report said 5,000,000 cartridges being shipped to Ethiopia from Belgium were being held up by French authorities at Djibouti, French Somaliland.

By the United Press.

Rome, July 3.—Premier Benito Mussolini today wrestled with the problem of transporting troops, war materials and foodstuffs to his forces in east Africa.

As diplomatic interest in the Italo-Abyssinian crisis increased, Mussolini convened an extraordinary session of his committee of admirals, the supreme consultative organ of the navy, and discussed the Anglo-German naval agreement as well as maintenance of communication with armed forces on the Ethiopian frontier.

Neither the foreign office nor the Ethiopian legation, would confirm reports of a new clash between Italian and Abyssinian troops at Eritrea. Officials described as "just another story" reports that Italian troops are preparing to spread chemicals on the ground to burn the barefooted Ethiopian forces. Such strategy would be unsound, because Italian native troops also go barefoot.

Ethiopian Charge d'Affaires Jesus revealed officials in Addis Ababa were shocked by proposals of Capt. R. Anthony Eden, British secretary for League of Nations affairs, that Great Britain mediate the Italo-Abyssinian dispute.

"Capt. Eden's proposals to Premier Mussolini were surprisingly unethical," Jesus said. "Ethiopia was never consulted."

Conversations between Britain and Ethiopia may be inaugurated shortly.

New Gold Suit Cites Damages By Dollar's Cut

Plaintiff in Case Settled by Highest Court Brings Second Action.

John M. Perry, New York attorney, yesterday made another effort to force the Government to pay him more than the face value of a $10,000 gold clause Liberty bond which he holds, when he filed a second suit in the Court of Claims, this time claiming $20,000 in damages.

Perry's first suit was the basis of the Supreme Court decision last February that, while Congress had no authority to abrogate the gold clause in Government bonds and had thus breached the Government's contract which Perry, the latter had failed to show any damages and had not attempted to show any damages.

The suit filed yesterday was brought on the same $10,000 bond which figured in the first case. This time he did not rely alone on the arithmetic of his case by which $10,000 in gold of the old standard of value would now be worth $16,931.25 in gold of the present value, as he did in the first suit.

Instead he contended that "the purchasing power of 10,000 United States gold coins each containing 25.8 grains of gold 0.9 fine or their equivalent," the former gold content of the dollar, "is at least equal to the purchasing power of $16,931.25 in present legal tender currency."

Without specifying how he arrived at the conclusion, Perry contended that by the refusal of the Treasury to pay him at least $16,931.25 for his bond he had been damaged to the extent of $20,000 and that in addition, computed on the gold basis, the Treasury owed him $1,912.50 as interest. He claimed a total of $21,912.50.

Justice Department attaches said they were not disturbed by the new Perry suit, since it would be outlawed by congressional action long before the Court of Claims could take testimony sustaining the claim for damages. The Government may be sued only with its consent and a bill is now pending in Congress withdrawing the privilege to sue the Government on any security, coin or currency.

This legislation would outlaw "any proceeding of any nature whatsoever presently or hereafter commenced" as above specified. The legislation also would forbid the payment for any security, coin or currency "except on an equal and uniform dollar-for-dollar basis."

Thus, it was asserted, the Perry suit is academic, unless Congress fails to act or makes an exception to pending suits. The only suit under the gold clause now pending is one brought by Robert Taft, son of the former President, for $1.07, representing the interest on a $100 called Liberty Bond for the three-month period following its retirement. Taft contended that the Government by breaching its contract when it abrogated the gold clause forfeited its right to call its bonds before maturity.

Hitler-Beck Talk Shuns Danzig Snarl

Der Fuehrer in 2 Sessions With Polish Official.

By the Associated Press.

Berlin, July 3.—Adolf Hitler and Joseph Beck, Polish foreign minister, met twice today and discussed ways of tightening Polish-German relations.

The difficult question of the Nazi-dominated free city of Danzig at the head of Pomorze (the Polish Corridor), which has been experiencing financial difficulties recently, was not broached, an official Polish source said after Beck's second meeting with the German realm leader.

Beck, arriving to spend two days in Berlin, was welcomed by high German officials, while Chancellor Hitler's own picked Nazi guards stood at attention.

Mt. Vesuvius Belches Flames In Stupendous July 4 Display

No Danger to Naples as Eruption, to Last 5 Days, Opens New 'Throat.'

By the Associated Press.

Naples, Italy, July 3.—Mount Vesuvius thundered and spat flame through a newly opened throat tonight after alarming citizens of Naples and nearby towns with a terrifying eruption at dawn today.

However, scientific observers at the Vesuvius Observatory spent the day assuring the populace there was no danger.

This evening, therefore, the roaring flames spouting from the volcano whose lava and ashes buried the ancient civilization of Pompeii became an impromptu and unfeared pyrotechnic display for hundreds of thousands of Neopolitans and tourists in the Bay of Naples district.

The observatory reported that this morning's explosion merely opened a new fissure within the giant crater of the volcano, helping the two others known to exist to blow off the tons of accumulated gas, steam and dross in the big volcano.

There was no danger, the observatory said, because the lava remained within the volcano's crater and did not begin to flow down the sides of the mountain. Prof. Malladra, of the observatory, was quoted as estimating the eruption would continue five days.

Fete Honors Naval Group From Brazil

Chief of Operations and Mrs. Standley Head Receiving Line.

By Evelyn Peyton Gordon.

"There's something about a soldier!" And that also applies to naval officers, as was proved by the groups of young girls who gathered around the young Brazilian midshipmen and officers at the reception given yesterday afternoon at the Mayflower in the name of the Secretary of the Navy, Mr Claude A. Swanson.

The party was in honor of Capt. Durval de Oliveira Teixeira, commander of the Brazilian training ship, Almirante Saldanha, which has been in the New York harbor for several days. The midshipmen and some of the officers of the ship came to Washington Tuesday morning and after spending that day at Annapolis, where they inspected the United States Naval Academy and were entertained at tea there in the afternoon, they returned to the Capital.

Washington is quite accustomed to entertaining these naval officers and their students, for each year some ship, if not several, comes to these shores, and surely the officers and midshipmen visit Washington whether the ship is in New York, Baltimore, Annapolis or in the Navy Yard here.

Yesterday afternoon the Chinese rooms of the Mayflower seemed filled with handsome, dark youths in stiff white uniforms, the jackets buttoned high under their chins, and the dark blue epaullettes trimmed with shining gold braid. The Chief of Naval Operations and Mrs. William H. Standley headed the receiving line, assisted by Maj. Maurice G. Holmes, U. S. M. C., who made the introductions.

Mrs. Standley wore a gown of palest pink lace with a corsage of gardenias and a wide-brimmed black hat. Also in the line were the Ambassador of Brazil, Mr. Oswaldo Aranha, and in the absence of Mme. Aranha, who is spending some time at Bedford Springs, Mme. de Sousa Freitas, wife of the second Secretary of Embassy; Mr. Decio de Moura, second Secretary, and Capt. Teixeira.

Guests mingled with the officers and young midshipmen, most of whom spoke English, and if they lacked conversation, it was not apparent, for there was much laughter about the pronunciation of words as the young men learned new phrases, and the other guests made an attempt at the very difficult Portuguese which is the language of Brazil.

There were buffets of sandwiches, delicious canapes, cakes, ices, and another where there were cocktails and a refreshing rum punch.

Pretty Miss Priscilla Watson, daughter of Rear Admiral and Mrs. Adolphus Watson, who has recently returned to the Capital from the West Coast, where her father has been stationed for two years, was there, entertaining a group of midshipmen. She wore a smart frock of white printed with bright colors and a wide-brimmed hat.

Others glimpsed were Rear Admiral and Mrs. Joseph Taussig, the latter in a chiffon afternoon frock of pale pink with a large hat of pale blue; Commander and Mrs. Ralph C. Alexander, the latter in a red and white printed crepe frock, with a large white hat. Mrs. Maurice G. Holmes, wife of Maj. Holmes, wore a gown of light blue chiffon and lace, with a smart black hat.

Suits for Boys Show Influence Of Hollywood

By Ruth Anne Davis.

HOLLYWOOD'S influence on fashion gains another point with the appearance in Washington of the new Freddie Bartholomew suits for boys.

Parents who want the apple of their eye to look just right for some special occasion may go far and see much before they find anything to compete in real smartness with these nifty outfits. There's a certain English dash about them, a casual sportiness, that will please both Johnny and his mother, too.

Often harum scarum youngsters resent being turned out in Sunday best and there's a hue and a cry when the occasion arrives. Freddie Bartholomew suits overcomes such difficulties by their boyish appeal. They're so far removed from anything Lord Fauntleroy-ish, and so closely in line with what a boy really likes to wear that he's tickled pink to "go Bartholomew" in this sartorial way.

A natural colored linen coat, with pleated back is edged with either navy or brown with accompanying poplin slacks to match the edging. On the pocket is a small insignia consisting of a star placed between bars.

The suits are available in sizes 4 to 10. Do see one!

Variety of Fans Displayed.

There's always a fascination about fans. Whether they are the large lacy ones which suggest mantillas and tangoes, or whether they're the coquetish little Japanese fans, they have a definite appeal. That's why there's usually an interested little group around the fan counter in a downtown store. While those on display here are far from being masterpieces, they come in so many varied shapes, and at such low prices, it's fun to look them over. There are many of the large palmetto leaves, some of woven straw, some natural color, others gaudy native hues. They start at 10 cents and range to 50 cents.

Stylish Rain Outfits.

There was a time when rainy days meant wearing old clothes and wrapping yourself in a shapeless, apologetic looking raincoat. But no more. Just pause on your next shopping tour at the rainy day counter of a local store. Here you'll find some smart oil cloth coats with a carefree air about them, and literally brimful of style. These, for your greater convenience, come in small oilcloth bags which you can carry, much as you would a purse, or tuck away in the pocket of your coat.

The outfits are available in brown and a creamy white. It's a treat to see them and a rare pleasure to own one.

Light Traveling Bags.

Vacationists who ponder the problem of "traveling light" must, after they've settled the wardrobe question, consider the luggage angle. Why encumber oneself now with hat boxes and suitcases which tip the scales like heavyweight champions? Why not take advantage of the airweight luggage featured in a downtown store?

Some extremely attractive pieces found yesterday are covered over with glazed tweed to give them that casual, well-to-do sportiness. They come in several sizes ranging from week-end bags to large suitcases. Dull faille silk linings, nickel or brass locks, give them a perfect finish. You may buy them in either gray or tan tones for very, very little.

Cool Weather Aprons.

Remember the rubber aprons and panties that warm weather made so impossible to wear?

They're being far outshone by the new panties and bloomers and aprons made of fine net and animal gut. These, beside being cool and comfortable, are proof against breaking and cracking and rustling. Incidentally, they're easily laundered.

Round Yoke Adds Charm To Cool Summer Pattern

Pattern No. 867.

IT'S NEW, different—and becoming. No wonder it's popular—the attractive round yoke on this summer frock. And here it gracefully molds the shoulders and trims the front and back of the gown with tab extensions.

Cool, fluttery sleeve caps, blouse fullness, and an interesting skirt are the other features which make this an unusually charming gown. And it strikes that happy medium between dressy and not dressy which makes it wearable on so many occasions. A large, illustrated chart gives detailed instructions for cutting and sewing. The pattern is designed in sizes 14 to 42. Size 18 (36) requires 3⅞ yards of 39-inch material and five-eighth yard of contrasting fabric for the yoke.

Pointers Given on Buying Meat for Small Family

Steak Can Be Served as Roast and Leftovers as Casserole Dish.

By Dorothea Duncan.

MORE ADO about this business of menus for two, but this time to stress the importance of planning and marketing. If you wish to be practical about it—and everyone does these days—just throw to the four winds the idea of serving a whole baked ham, a roast chicken, or a standing rib roast of beef. It is important to consider meat at first because this is the feature of the set-up for two which gives the most trouble.

Even though you are going to strike from your shopping list the larger cuts of meat, you can still let these favorites form a part of the menu for the smallest of families. You won't be limited merely to the expensive cuts, either, such as steaks and chops. Just look over this list of meats that can be purchased in small enough quantities for two: Hamburg balls or steak, lamb, mutton, veal or pork chops, liver, sweetbreads, kidneys, oxtails, chop suey, sausages, scrapple, dried beef, sliced ham, frying or broiling chicken, bacon, seafood (crabs, lobster, shrimp, scallops, oysters, and the smaller fish or filets of fish). Some of these items are distinctly winter dishes but they are listed simply to give you an idea of the wide range of meats adaptable for menus for the smallest of families.

The Roast Problem.

Naturally you will want a taste of roast beef occasionally and you can have it but you won't have to buy a large roast to satisfy your appetite. Instead of buying the large roast, get a thick steak, have it rolled and tied and roast it in a hot oven (450 to 500 degrees Fahrenheit) for a short time. If even this is too large a roast cut the heart from the roast and keep the outside scraps for a casserole dish.

This brings us to the point of steaks that are too large. A choice cut of steak is often too large for a family of two. It is never an extravagance, however, to buy a large steak. The choicest portion, that part which includes the tenderloin, should be cut out and broiled. The other portion can be kept for a casserole or ground beef dish for a later meal.

If you are saving a portion of the steak, cut it off before the meat is cooked. Steak is better when cooked the first time rather than when reheated, because the meat is thin and after a second cooking or reheating most of the juice has been lost.

When your taste runs to other types of roasts, lamb, mutton or veal, try this plan. Buy as many loin chops as you will need. Have the butcher separate the bones at the joints but do not have the meat cut through. Cook the meat as a standing roast.

Ham Cooked in Oven.

A thick slice of ham can be cooked in the oven and if first coated with mustard, flour, brown sugar and stuffed with cloves it will taste exactly as a slice from a whole baked ham would taste. Double chops—veal, mutton, or lamb—may be cut with a pocket for dressing and baked in the oven with the result that they will taste as delectable as a stuffed shoulder of veal, mutton or lamb.

Pot roasts, though usually sold in large sizes, may be had in one or two pound pieces. The smaller pot roast will be quite satisfactory, but it must be watched more carefully while cooking, for it may become too dry.

Shellfish, of course, are particularly well adapted to use for the smallest of families. This kind of seafood may be purchased in exactly the required amounts. Large fish usually serve about six or more portions. These won't be an economical selection, but then you have a choice of any number of small fish or filets or steak cut from the larger fish.

It is better to pay a little more per pound for a small cut of meat than to buy a cheaper cut that necessitates buying a quantity of meat that can't possibly be eaten in one or two meals.

Women Bullfighters Increase In Spain Despite Ban by Statute

By the Associated Press.

MADRID, July 3.—The profession of bullfighting is by law closed to women in Spain, but an increasing number of the fair sex is taking advantage of the fact that violations are winked at.

The latest recruit to the ranks of feminine cape and sword artists is the well-known Spanish dancer, Soledad Miralles.

"I happened to be attending a fiesta at a bull ranch in Alicante Province and a number of the guests, including several women, were amusing themselves caping young bulls," Miss Miralles, a flashing Andalusian type, said in explaining her new vocation.

"They invited me to try it, and although the idea didn't appeal to me at all, I went into the bull pen just to show I was as game as the rest.

"I guess I was pretty awkward that first time, but I succeeded in conquering my fear and the game of mastering these splendid fighting beasts so fascinated me I determined to take it up seriously.

"I got myself an outfit, studied the theory of caping and killing, and then went through a complete faena and killed the bull—not very gracefully but not so bad for a beginner.

"Since then I have learned much and my ability at dancing has helped me a great deal. The grace embodied in dancing is much like that displayed by great bullfighters."

There are more than a dozen women engaged in bullfighting as a profession in Spain today.

This BUSINESS of LIVING

By Mary Haworth.

"IMPATIENT and not a little annoyed with the heterogeneous mass of stuff foisted on us poor defenseless women (radio) listeners," a young housewife who signed herself "Fed-Up" solicited the help of this column Monday in obtaining "the reaction of readers to this question of better radio programs for housewives."

Her spirited indictment of radio announcers and women's radio programs has loosed a flood of letters from writers who, for the most part, congratulate her on her stand. That the discussion is not to be all onesided, however, is revealed in a letter today from an 18-year-old girl who maintains that the discriminating listener-in can, if he will, seek and find a radio program to his taste.

Also, among the more interesting letters received to date is one from a woman whose 20 years' sojourn abroad convinces her they do these things better on the European continent. Both letters follow, M. H.

• • • •

Listening-in Abroad.

DEAR MISS HAWORTH: "Fed-Up" expressed my complaints against the unsatisfactory type of radio programs offered housewives better than I can hope to do; so I herewith indorse her sentiments.

I am a privileged housekeeper who hasn't very much actual housework to do. But after I have been to market, have done a certain amount of chamber work, I like to turn on the radio while I do the mending, while my 18-year-old daughter sews.

• • • •

She was born abroad and I have lived 20 years in Paris, with holidays in Austria, Switzerland and Belgium. Americans are apt to sneer at foreign radio programs and glorify our own. But no one abroad would take time to listen to the radio ineptitudes which are served to us here.

• • • •

A cooking lesson in Germany is given by a chef who is teaching a class. His descriptions of the dish he is preparing are concise, clear and to the point. A well-trained nurse or doctor will give a short talk on the health of the family or specialize on the child.

In France, one of the most interesting programs of the day is sponsored by the government, the P. T. T. the Post, Telegraph and Telephone). There are 10-minute items; interior politics; exterior politics; book review; review of picture exhibitions; review of movies; review of theaters; the musical offering of the day, with a short analysis of the music and a few words on the composer, a scientific review and a medical review.

• • • •

The only items which are daily are the political ones; the others vary from day to day. All the speakers are distinguished men in their branch of art or learning. Surely such a program would be appreciated by a busy housewife and she would even be willing to listen to an honest advertisement afterward.

• • • •

Please save us from this "drivel" we either have to listen to or dial off to prevent our minds from being completely stupefied. And, thank "Fed-Up," for voicing our dissatisfaction. Sincerely yours,

ALSO FED-UP.

• • • •

Pick Your Program.

DEAR MISS HAWORTH: Perhaps I shouldn't be answering the interesting letter from "Fed-Up" in Monday's paper, since I am neither housewife nor housekeeper. I am just 18 and unmarried, but I am an "habitual morning radio listener."

After reading "Fed-Up's" letter I turned immediately to the radio program hunter or if she merely to wonder then if "Fed-Up" is a program-hunter or if she merely turns the radio on and lets it run. I would say that in today's quite typical program she will find items that are intelligent, amusing and educational.

• • • •

While I was in school, mother evolved a satisfactory program which I follow with interest now that school is closed. Before 9 one does encounter those inevitable disk recordings, so I suggest "Fed-Up" either tune in on Godfrey or eliminate the radio before 9. Then, at 9, there is news or song; at 9:15, the Philosopher or Jean Abbey; 9:30, Today's Children; 9:45, news flashes; 10, the Honeymooners; 10:15, Tony Wons; 10:30 to 11:30, the Navy Band or "Words and Music;" 12 noon, "The Woman's Hour;" 12:30, "The Farm and Home Hour." After this, I suggest the Music Guild for 30 minutes to an hour, or "Home Sweet Home" and "Vic and Sade," for the second 30 minutes. Add "Ma Perkins" or "Vaugh de Leath" and you have your day filled with one break at 2:45 p. m.

• • • •

As for the distressing commercial "plugs," I admit some of them are pretty fierce. But one can always take them with a saving sense of humor, or cut the volume until the advertsing period is over. We must concede, however, that much time is given to "sustaining" noncommercial programs.

• • • •

I do hope, Miss Haworth, that you will see fit to publish this letter. I hope it is not forbidden to mention programs by name, and I assure you I'm not "plugging" for any product, either. My preferred program is taken from every local station.

Irritants Add To Heat Rash And Impetigo

Latter Skin Disease Highly Contagious, Cutter Says; a July 4 Warning.

By Dr. Irving S. Cutter.

PRICKLY HEAT, or heat rash, usually follows profuse sweating and, as a rule, appears on the covered surfaces of the body and in folds of the skin. The tiny red raised areas are at first due to congestion of the sweat glands. Later there may appear to be an even, reddish blush due to the fact that the inflamed points are so numerous and so close together.

The principal symptom is marked tingling, smarting, or burning of the skin that continues for a few days or even a much longer period. The condition is particularly troublesome in individuals who are overweight and in those who perspire freely.

Soap aggravates the symptoms and hence should not be used on the affected parts. An excellent remedy is a simple dusting powder that contains equal parts of boric acid, zinc oxide and starch. Before the powder is applied the skin should be thoroughly cleansed with a 25 per cent solution of grain alcohol. Extract of witch hazel will serve the same purpose. The alcohol and the powder should be used several times daily if the smarting is noticeable.

Impetigo is another common skin disorder, the occurrences of which is increased during the summer months. It is said to be responsible for 20 per cent of all the ordinary skin eruptions. The condition may be readily recognized by the appearance of a small round blister that is sometimes called the "mother blister." This "mother" promptly proceeds to rear many children and the lesions spread, the blisters break, and hard crusts form. Sometimes the blisters become puslike and discharge their yellowish semiliquid contents. Unless properly managed the disease can become extensive and stubborn.

"Lest we forget" a reminder should be dropped that firecracker burns and wounds may require attention. Clean all wounds with soap and water and cover only with sterile gauze. If the skin has been lacerated and dirt has entered, a physician should be called to administer tetanus (lockjaw) antitoxin.

New P. E. O. Chapter Organized in Capital Will Have Jurisdiction Over 11 Other Groups

Miss Laura V. D. Hanson Installed as President at Meeting.

By Gertrude Hummer.

ANOTHER STATE chapter was added to the rapidly growing P. E. O. Sisterhood yesterday. The new District of Columbia Chapter will have jurisdiction over the 11 District chapters. The new officers, elected and installed yesterday, are Miss Laura V. D. Hanson, of Chapter E, president; Mrs. Kenneth D. Jacob, Chapter D, first vice president; Dr. Ella R. Fales, Chapter A, second vice president; Mrs. Betty Reed, Chapter K, organizer; Mrs. Elizabeth Ferguson, Chapter H, recording secretary; Mrs. Nellie Higbie, Chapter I, corresponding secretary, and Mrs. Harry L. Underwood, Chapter G, treasurer.

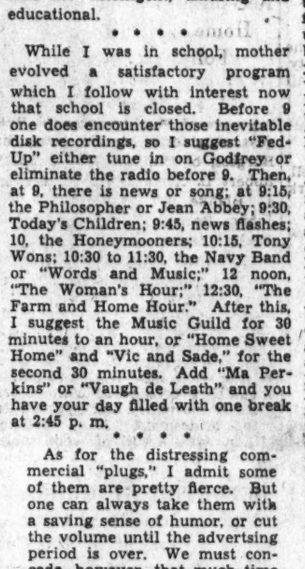
Delegates to the supreme convention to be held September 10-13 at Yellowstone National Park are Dr. Ella R. Fales, Chapter A; Mrs. Willard E. Buell, Chapter D, and Mrs. J. J. Campbell, Chapter E.

The phenomenal growth of P. E. O. in the 66 years since it was organized as a college society is an effective answer to the charge that women's clubs are waning, maintains Miss Mabel D. Doud, of Aurora, Ill., Supreme president, here for the organization of the new chapter.

The P. E. O. Sisterhood has approximately 56,000 members, with chapters in the United States, Canada, and Hawaii, and an educational fund of $800,000. Since it was founded 46,000 young women have been helped to a higher education.

Miss Doud was initiated in the P. E. O., in Chapter P, Chicago, in 1906. She was born in Iowa and received her education in that State and Illinois. For the past two years she has been associated with St. Katherine's, an Episcopal school for girls, in Davenport, Ia.

She has served Illinois State Chapter as treasurer, first vice president and president, and has held the offices of treasurer, first and second vice president of Supreme Chapter before her election to the presidency.



Underwood & Underwood.

MISS MABEL DAVENPORT DOUD,
supreme president, P. E. O., yesterday installed the officers of the new District of Columbia Chapter.

The P. E. O., one of the biggest and oldest women's organizations in the United States, was founded by seven young girls, January 21, 1869, at Iowa Wesleyan College. They are Mary Allen, Alice Bird, Hattie Briggs, Alice Virginia Coffin, Suela Pearson, Franc Roads and Ella Stewart. To this day its members have never revealed what the letters P. E. O. stand for.

One of the five oldest living members is Mrs. Worthy P. Sterns, of Washington, who joined the organization in 1877. Others include Mrs. Lou Woodruff, Mrs. Effie A. Williams, Mrs. Hortense Fuller, and Mrs. Alice Curtis.

The Sisterhood is the owner and administrator of the Cottey College at Nevada, Mo. This college is the only one in the United States founded by a woman and entirely staffed by women teachers. It was given to the society by Mrs. Virginia Cottey Stockard. Dr. Florence Boehmer, president of the college, is one of the foremost women's educators in the country.

The third achievement of the group is the Memorial Library at Mount Pleasant, Iowa. This library was erected in honor of the founders of the society, and every chapter of the organization holds a founder's day celebration and banquet each year on January 21.

Plight of Europe's Women a Warning To U. S. Sisters, Miss Alice Paul Asserts

Party Founder Tells of Efforts Abroad to Regain Lost Rights.

By Hope Ridings Miller.

MISS ALICE PAUL,
noted militant feminist, recently returned from a year abroad, urges American women to fight for their privileges and to press forward to the status of equal rights with men. "Otherwise, we may expect to lose all our rights, as women in Europe have, already," she said yesterday.

IN EUROPE the question is no longer whether women will be bundled back to the kitchen. They are already there. The few who have clung to public employment against all odds are now being forced out surely and not so slowly. The many already replaced by men have little hope of ever turning their attentions and talents to anything except "home, children and church."

So reports Miss Alice Paul, founder of the National Woman's Party, who recently returned from a year abroad, where, as a member of the women's consultative committee on nationality, created by the Council of the League of Nations, she has been a force in the movement to reinstate women to their former status, and to win for them equal rights with men.

Yesterday at the headquarters of the National Woman's Party, she told of what is being done to strengthen the woman's movement throughout the world and stressed the need for support.

Straining at Leash, She Says.

Deprived of their former rights and privileges, women in Europe are straining at the leash, resentful, yet helpless in the face of existing conditions, according to Miss Paul. "And the result is, men and women are facing each other as enemies today as never before," she said. "Never in my life have I seen such discrimination against women; never since the turn of the century—and even before—have women been more in danger of losing every right, of gaining none."

She pointed out that women in many European countries, particularly in Germany, are being denied education because universities have cut down on the quota of women students.

This led to more discussion of the situation in Germany and the way it had changed within the last five years. Miss Paul mentioned that when she was in Geneva in 1930, Germany was the only country sending a woman representative to the League. "There were 42 women in the Reichstag, and women were succeeding in virtually every line of public work," she went on. "There's no need to elaborate on the German woman's position today. She has none—except in the home."

Forced Out of Teaching.

In this connection she recommended the case of a highly trained German woman who was forced to resign a teaching position because male pupils in her classes kept up a continuous chant of "German men won't be taught by women!" "This is only one case, and one method to illustrate how women are being forced out of gainful occupations," she said.

"But Germany is not the only country in which women are victims of gross discrimination," Miss Paul continued. "The situation there and in Italy has been more dramatic, more widely publicized," she said, "but it is no more obvious, no more distressing there than in Austria, Yugoslavia, Czechoslovakia, Spain and even France."

Miss Paul told what had been done in Geneva the past year in an effort to improve the status of women. A member of the committee created by the Council of the League of Nations, she worked with representatives from 16 countries in the interest of two equality treaties, which if accepted, would give women the chance they have always desired.

Equal Rights Pact Proposed.

One of these, the equal rights treaty, would obligate each government accepting it, to establish and maintain complete equality of rights between men and women. The other, called the equal nationality treaty, is similar in conception to the equal rights treaty, but is confined to nationality. "This special provision was proposed by women's organizations because of the fact that the Hague Conference on the Codification of International Law has proposed a treaty on nationality," said Miss Paul.

The first step in the work of the women's consultative committee was to have the two treaties placed on the League of Nations agenda. The next, was to get the women's international organizations to indorse it. "A year ago, only one woman's international group, the Inter-American Commission of Women, supported it," Miss Paul explained. "Today, 12 stand back of it. And now we are ready for the third step," she went on. "Women are already working to negotiate it by returning to their own countries to urge their governments to indorse the treaties."

Warns of Losing Privileges.

"Since the United States is not a member of the league, this step cannot be taken by American women," she continued. "But there is much more we can do. We can keep what privileges we have, press forward until we have gained equal rights in our own country, and serve as an inspiration to women all over the world."

"If we don't" . . . Miss Paul repeated the words slowly. Her blue eyes narrowed as if she were looking far into the future. "If we don't, we can look at European women today and see ourselves ten, or even five, years from now. With what we have at the present, it's hard for American women to realize they, too, might one day be sent back to the kitchen. But it is well to remember that every right, every privilege we have today, German women had a decade ago."

What Today Means

"Cancer."

IF JULY 4 is your birthday, the best hours for you on this date are from 11:30 a. m. to 1:30 p. m., from 3:30 to 5:30 p. m. and from 7:30 to 9:30 p. m. The danger periods are from 8:30 to 10:30 a. m., from 5:30 to 7:30 p. m. and from 9:30 to 11:30 p. m.

Regardless of one's nationality, the Fourth of July should stand forth as a wonderful symbol of the unselfish virtues of true patriotism. It will be well worth your time to spend a little of it this day reflecting on what you have contributed to, in comparison with the benefits you have received from your country. Your introspection will probably revive your spirit of loyalty, as well as a determination to serve your government, unmindful of parties or creeds; as one, who wishes to be a true patriot should.

Social activities should be productive of much pleasure and be a medium of strengthening friendships. You may meet some person whose extreme views might be offensive. Good-natured ridicule is likely to be a much better weapon to use than an explosive temper.

If a woman and July 4 is your birthday, you probably are generous to a fault. You possibly have a surplus of energy and enthusiasm, which will help you to gain your objective in most cases. As honey draws the bees, the sweetness of your disposition is likely to attract friends. Being mentally alert, you will successfully avoid pitfalls or snares. Teaching, missionary work, lecturing demonstrating, as well as selling, are among the vocational occupations that are apt to be lucrative for you.

If a man and July 4 is your natal day, timidity will never be a fault from which you will suffer. If you cultivate a gracious manner, as well as a modified amount of self-assurance, your social and business results possibly will pass your expectations. Politics, writing, painting, theology music as well as manufacturing and certain branches of salesmanship, offer you the best opportunities for gain.

Teacher's Life Held Tyranny Due to Taboos

Small Town Schoolmarm Writes Blast Against Public Nagging.

THE AMERICAN school teacher is tired of being bossed, nagged and criticized by the public. She is tired of having her patrons say where she shall live, how she shall dress, what her recreations shall be and what dates she shall have.

So says a rebel schoolmarm speaking for her profession in an anonymous article in the current American Mercury. Describing herself as a school teacher in a small town in the Middlewest, the "Belongs" to Community.

"In the community where I work, the popular assumption is that a teacher's life belongs to the community, so I am subject to the whims of the citizens," she wrote. "For example, I am expected to spend most of my week-ends in town. I must attend church regularly, and I am really expected to teach a Sunday school class in spite of the fact that I have already faced these same youngsters for 40 hours during the previous week. If I had a voice, I should also be expected to sing in the choir. Indeed, the local attitude toward church attendance is so exacting that I have recently caught myself sneaking down a back street to and from breakfast on those mornings when I did not attend church."

Town Sets Up Many Taboos.

In addition to the usual ban on cigarettes and cocktails (for teachers), the author has discovered that:

"Although the people of this community do not consider it actually sinful to dance, they set a taboo upon all available dance halls and forget to invite me to their own dances. One of my friends here does not dare invite her friends to her rooming house for a bridge party. Likewise, I may not go to Sunday movies . . . I am not permitted to receive telegrams, telephone calls, or special delivery letters at school."

The taxpayer, who inveighs against teachers' salaries of $1,200 a year, "seldom remembers to divide that sum by 12 before comparing it with his own income," and criticizes the luxury of a long summer vacation without realizing the saving involved in preparing for "three months of forced unemployment annually."

Believing her case is not unique, this teacher concludes with a warning to the community:

"I can not truly interpret modern life to my students if I am forced to live as an outsider . . . in the community. I can not train them for a coming social order if I am not permitted to question anything in existing system without being classed as a radical.

Truck License War Between Two States Reaches An Impasse

West Virginia, Maryland Order Cars Lacking Tags Seized.

Four Vehicles Are Impounded

Passenger Autos Aren't Affected by Order in Retaliation.

By the Associated Press.

Baltimore, July 3.—The "truck war" between West Virginia and Maryland had reached an impasse tonight, with motor vehicle executives of both States standing firm on orders that the trucks of each are to be seized unless properly licensed.

Four trucks owned by a West Virginia concern were impounded at Oakland, Md., on order of Magistrate Charles F. White, who said proper tags had been ordered for them but that they would not be released until the licenses actually were on the vehicles.

At Martinsburg, W. Va., State troopers had seized three trucks up to this evening. The drivers were taken before a justice and hearing set for a week hence.

Passenger cars are not affected by the orders, authorities of both States emphasized.

Trucks Ordered Seized.

The retaliatory action on the part of West Virginia followed issuance of an order by Walter N. Rudy, Maryland motor vehicles commissioner, to State police to seize every West Virginia truck carrying goods for hire.

James T. Tierney, superintendent of transportation for West Virginia, asserted today officers of that State previously had been ordered to warn Maryland truckmen but to make no arrest until after July 7. The measure, calling for tags and permits on all out-of-State trucks not carrying livestock, produce or fruit, was passed by the West Virginia legislators effective July 1.

In a statement today, Rudy said: "We won't bother farmers carrying their produce to town, but every motor express from West Virginia that has no Maryland license will be impounded."

Overtures Rejected.

He said he had attempted to arrange a conference in advance of the date the law became effective, but that his overtures were rejected. He indicated the next move was "up to West Virginia."

"West Virginia trucks can't reach Philadelphia or New York without passing through Maryland," he said. "Many more of their trucks use our roads than ours use theirs. I'm ready for a conference at any time, but now they must take the necessary steps to bring it about."

He said he understood trade associations and truck companies in West Virginia "have gone to work on this problem." He intimated several truck owners applied for licenses here today.

Virginia authorities also were reported to have taken retaliatory measures by arresting West Virginia truck drivers.

State police tonight were patrolling all roads in the proximity of the State borders in Garrett County.

Autos Fatal to 3 Near Richmond

Driver Held in Hit-Run Death of Pair.

By the Associated Press.

Richmond, Va., July 3.—A white man and a colored man and woman were killed in auto accidents on the Richmond-Washington Highway early today.

Paul Parrish, 27, of Richmond, died of a fractured skull in a Fredericksburg hospital after the car he was driving ran off the road and crashed. State Policeman Sam S. Redding said he thought Parrish went to sleep while driving. Officials of a motor company which employed the man here as a salesman, said he was driving a used car without their permission.

The colored persons, Aaron Johnson, 30, and Hattie Saunders, 38, both of Ashland, were killed six miles north of here by a hit-and-run driver. State Policeman R. A. Faison arrested W. G. Weiss, of Ashland, on charges of manslaughter. Faison said auto accessories found near the scene of the accident matched those on Weiss' car.

Ditch Diggers Reveal 9 Soldiers' Skeletons

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Fredericksburg Va., July 3.—Emergency relief workmen digging a ditch for a drain pipe as part of a city park improvement project yesterday uncovered the bones of nine persons, most of whom are believed to have been soldiers killed in the battle of Fredericksburg in 1862.

The city park was at one time a cemetery and many persons prominent in the affairs of this section years ago were buried there. One of those said to be buried there is Dr. Charles Mortimer, first mayor of Fredericksburg and physician to Mrs. Mary Washington, mother of George Washington.

That the bones found yesterday were those of soldiers was indicated by the absence of wood that might have been remnants of a casket.

Captor Relates Suspect's Tale Of Girl Murder

Mississippi Sheriff Tells Negro's 'Confession' at Battlefield Park.

By the Associated Press.

Fredericksburg, Va., July 3.—The account given officers by Earl Conner Williams, Negro indicted Monday on charges of slaying Fannie Kurz in the Battlefield Park here in 1934, of how he slew the girl and beat her escort, was related by Deputy Sheriff C. L. Pace, of Iuka, Miss., on a visit to the scene of the crime yesterday.

Pace captured the Negro in Mississippi and turned him over to Department of Justice Agents.

Williams told officers, Pace said, that he approached Milton Brown's car, in which he was sitting with Miss Kurz on the May night in 1934, and demanded money. He said Brown stepped out of the machine, parked about 200 yards from the Richmond-Washington highway, and agreed to give up his wallet to the Negro, who was armed with a section of lead pipe. Before he could get the money from his pocket, however, the Negro struck him over the head. Brown, stunned, fell, but started to arise again. Williams hit him again, knocking him unconscious.

Miss Kurz leaped from the car and started running toward the park entrance. Williams said he overtook her in 25 yards and hit her on the head with the piece of pipe. One blow rendered her insensible.

The Negro was quoted by Pace as saying that he picked up the man and woman and carried them to a ravine 50 yards away, where he took $25 from Brown and left both for dead.

The officer said that Williams, who was captured on a description broadcast by Department of Justice agents, first said he did not have an accomplice, but later implicated another Negro who is serving life imprisonment for a hold-up here. The Mississippi officer said he did not believe anyone assisted Williams in the attack.

Marylanders Fill Resorts To Celebrate

Only Annapolis, Elkton Lack Programs for the Fourth.

Fireworks Town Under Poll of Blasts; Navy to Fire Salute.

By the Associated Press.

With admonitions of city, county and State officials that today be observed in a safe and sane manner, Maryland citizens will flock to shore resorts, ball games, picnics and fireworks displays.

Most of the cities in the State arranged special holiday programs but at least two, Annapolis and Elkton, had no general observance on the books.

At Elkton, where hundreds of people work in fireworks factories the year around to provide noise for July 4 celebrants, no program was planned. Three of the fireworks factory employes there died in factory fires and explosions in the last month and two of the score or more injured in the two blasts still are in hospitals.

Auto Tag Rush Heavy.

Annapolis' only holiday celebration will be a 21-gun salute to be fired at the Naval Academy. Ships at the station will be in full dress, however.

Offices of the commissioner of motor vehicles in Baltimore were rushed with last-minute applications for automobile titles and license plates yesterday, indicating that many owners of new cars are planning to take to the highways for their holiday. More than 800 titles were issued yesterday, 1,200 Monday and more than 1,000 Tuesday.

Features of planned celebrations in other Maryland municipalities were:

Cumberland—The Democrat Cosmopolitan Club planned an all-day picnic at Crystal Park. Speakers included Representative David J. Lewis of the Sixth Maryland District, and Representative Fred J. Sisson, of New York State. Sports events were headed by a double-header between the Ridgeley and Cresaptown baseball teams.

Athletics Versus Fireworks.

Hagerstown—A busy day was scheduled for Hagerstown citizens. A theater party for children, a parade, athletic contests at the fairgrounds and a monster fireworks display headed the program. The Boy Scout Council is sponsoring the athletic events at the fairgrounds in the interests of a "safer and saner Fourth of July."

Ocean City—Ocean City was ready for the annual influx of holiday visitors. Thirty rounds of boxing have been arranged by the Ocean City Athletic Club.

Crisfield—A water carnival was scheduled for the holiday at Tangier Sound near here under auspices of the Red Cross, the adult emergency educational service for Somerset County and Dr. C. E. Collins, Crisfield health officer. Exhibitions of life saving and swimming will be given by Red Cross life savers and track and field events, boat racing, swimming races, dancing and fireworks display also were scheduled.

Tilghman—A ball game, prize fights and wrestling matches were scheduled for the day at Tilghman. The ladies aid of the Tilghman Church will serve a seafood and chicken dinner and a dance is scheduled for the evening.

'Dud' Firecracker Explodes in Mouth

Hagerstown, Md., July 3.—Hagerstown's toll of pre-Fourth of July casualties was increased to three injured today, when a firecracker, believed to be a dud, exploded in the mouth of Thomas Pickett, 6. The boy found the cracker near his home and, holding it in his mouth like a cigarette, lighted it. The explosion badly lacerated his lips and tongue.

A woman and man were injured earlier this week by flying pebbles from torpedoes.

Tax Revenue Up $564,799 In Maryland

Income From Gasoline and Liquor Higher For 6 Months.

Beverage Levy Due to Net Over Million For 1935.

By the Associated Press.

Annapolis, Md., July 3.—Maryland tax revenue from gasoline and liquor during the first six months of the current year was $564,799 above taxes paid during the same period of 1934.

The 4-cent gasoline tax brought in a total of $3,917,053 from January through June, compared to $3,514,199 last year. This increase boosted the treasury receipts by $402,854 over the previous period.

Income from the $1.10 State excise tax on liquors and from licenses issued to wholesalers, manufacturers, railroads and steamboats showed an increase for each month of the present year.

During the first half of 1934 the liquor revenue totaled $603,386, or $161,945 less than the $765,331 received in the first six months of the current year.

State Comptroller William S. Gordy, jr., estimated that the State would receive $1,310,000 in liquor revenue during 1935, but this figure now appears to be conservative.

Since the collection of the 1 per cent gross receipt and automobile titling taxes for relief purposes began in April, a total of $789,105 has been paid into the emergency relief fund account of the treasury.

The April receipts were $372,675, including $31,850 from the automobile tax, while the May receipts have reached $377,397, inclusive of $42,583 from the automobile levy.

The automobile tax brought in $39,033 during June, but June gross receipt payments are not due until midnight July 10.

Campaign to Boost Wheat Price Opens

Rep. Robertson Sees Surplus Hurting Crop.

By the Associated Press.

Representative Robertson, of Lexington, Va., was engaged yesterday in conversations with the Department of Agriculture in an effort to hasten the resumption of activity by the Grain Export Corporation to relieve a downward price pressure on Virginia-grown wheat.

A grain surplus in the Pacific Northwest has been blamed for the low price levels established in Virginia for wheat produced in that State. To relieve this situation Robertson urged the immediate resumption of the Northwest Pacific Export Corporation.

"I think we can get relief from the pressure of the Western supply by the immediate resumption of the corporation," he said. Agriculture officials said the subsidy plan was under consideration but that matters of international trade policies were involved.

Stains on Shirt Connect Youth With Murder

Police Seeking John Ellis in Fatal Stabbing at Chestertown, Md.

By the Associated Press.

Chestertown, Md., July 3.—A bloodstained shirt and an unclaimed pay envelope tonight were the principal links in a chain of evidence which local authorities hope will lead to the arrest of 21-year-old John Ellis, alleged knife murderer.

The shirt was located by State police in an upstairs room of Ellis' home in Chester, Pa., where officers instituted a vain search for the youth accused of stabbing Kelly C. Terry to death during a tavern dance here Saturday.

The Maryland officers, working in cooperation with Pennsylvania authorities, learned also that an unclaimed pay envelope is being held for him at a Chester manufacturing plant where he is said to have been employed.

A watch is being maintained at the factory in the hope Ellis will return there to claim the money. The bloodstained shirt was brought here to be held as important evidence pending the youth's arrest.

Ellis is alleged to have stabbed Terry during an altercation which followed an asserted attempt by Ellis to dance with Mrs. Terry.

Meanwhile, police here have practically exonerated William Pruitt, arrested shortly after the killing, in face of the evidence turned up thus far. Pruitt, who already is under $1,500 bond on a bootlegging charge, has been made a trusty at the county jail where he is being held.

Mrs. Terry, who confronted Pruitt yesterday, told Sheriff John N. Bennett "that's not the man." The suspect, officers said, told a story of his whereabouts on the night of the killing which later was supported by witnesses.

Negroes Forsaking The Old Dominion

Virginia's Negro population is leaving the State more rapidly than are the Old Dominion's whites, an analysis of the Census Bureau migration figures showed yesterday. A study of the Virginia figures is being made by former Gov. John Garland Pollard, now chairman of the Veterans Appeal Board, who became alarmed over recent reports that the State is losing population rapidly by migration.

The census of 1920 showed a total native population loss of 503,531. Of this total 244,088 were whites and 259,443 were Negroes. Pollard said most of the old States are losing population by migration to other States.

Marylanders Join Potato Embargo

Group at Pocomoke City Backs Virginia Strike.

By the Associated Press.

Pocomoke City, Md., July 3.—A group of Maryland buyers, meeting here today, decided to join the Virginia potato embargo. No potatoes were loaded as support was given the week-old Virginia strike to force potato prices to $2 a barrel.

Growers and buyers at a mass meeting Sunday will appoint committees to name a Maryland chairman. All prinicpal buyers in this territory were represented at the meeting in the office of Eugene P. Matthews, of the Atlantic Commission Co.

There has been no indication of trouble in this section due to the strike. Only a small amount of potatoes have been harvested. Digging starts in earnest next week.

Indications yesterday were that the Senate would not be ready to consider the banking bill on which he has been working until the middle of next week, according to the Associated Press.

Baltimore Bar Group Opposed To Wolf Pardon

Protest Sent by Criminal Justice Commission to Gov. Nice.

By the Associated Press.

Baltimore, uly 3.—The board of directors of the Baltimore criminal justice commission today informed Gov. Nice that it was opposed to a pardon for Harry B. Wolf, former outstanding Baltimore attorney.

Wolf was convicted in 1922 of conspiracy to obstruct justice in connection with the police investigation of the murder of a contractor during a holdup. He later was disbarred.

Gov. Nice announced last week that he would pardon Wolf if there were no substantial objection.

The board issued a statement, which read, in part:

"The commission wishes to make it clear at the very outset that it is only concerned with helping to make and keep the administration of justice on a high and efficient plane completely removed from politics. Any desire or intention to persecute Wolf as an individual is farthest from its purpose.

"The proposed Wolf pardon might not cause so much apprehension were it not so obviously the opening wedge for another attempt to reinstate Wolf as a member of the bar.

"The commission does not feel that there is any logic in the threadbare argument that 'Wolf has been punished enough.' The primary purpose of disbarment is not punishment but removal of one from the legal profession who has proved himself to be unfit to practice law, and punishment is only incidental. The facts in the Wolf case as set forth in the record of his trial and disbarment proceedings are the best evidence of his unfitness, and it must be remembered that a lawyer is technically an officer of the court."

U. S. Urged To Revamp Trade Policy

Institute at Virginia U. Hears Plea for Cooperation.

Prof. J. A. Dehaas Sees 'Isolation' Blocking Recovery.

By the Associated Press.

University, Va., July 3.—Pleas for international co-operation in abandoning policies of economic nationalism now prevalent in the United States and other leading nations were advanced tonight before the University of Virginia public affairs institute by Peter Molyneaux, editor of the Texas Weekly, and Prof. J. Anton Dehaas, of Harvard University.

"Further recovery can be hoped for only when the policy of isolation is abandoned," said Dehaas, who is professor of international relationships in the Harvard graduate school of business administration.

Wrong Course Chosen.

"It is becoming increasingly evident that in our attempt to reconstruct after the World War we have chosen the wrong paths. In an attempt to meet the emergency arising out of the collapse of 1929, all nations chose the paths of economic nationalism in the belief that it was far easier to attain recovery in isolation than in co-operation with others.

Prosperity will return to America only when world trade is restored, continued Molyneaux, who called upon the Roosevelt Administration to live up to its campaign promises and lower tariff barriers.

Earlier in the day, Clark M. Eichelberger, director of the League of Nations Association, told the institute round table on recovery that the world is so closely knit that no nation can expand today without threatening a world war.

"The world must choose, must plan its economic future," the league advocate asserted. "In any direction any nation looks for expansion today it runs contrary to the claims of other nations. The fact remains that the world community can not permit any nation, no matter how unfortunate its economic position, to expand by force of arms because the results are economic dislocation and a threat of world war.

Abyssinia Cited.

After discussing Japan's military conquest of Manchuria for economic reasons, Eichelberger outlined conditions between Italy and Abyssinia and added, "if Abyssinia is conquered with tacit permission of the world community the idea of collective action as well as of equality of states will have suffered a serious blow."

Following the Eichelberber speech on world affairs, the assembly had its attention drawn again to internal matters by Jacob Baker, Assistant Works Progress administrator, who this afternoon defended the Administration's relief policies by pointing to permanent results in the form of buildings and schools.

Federal relief administrative organizations should be simplified in the name of efficiency, Arthur W. James, Virginia's public welfare commissioner, told the institute.

James said that Virginia, in common with many States, had well developed welfare programs long before the depression forced the Federal Government to step in. He traced Virginia's activities in caring for the needy from the days of the founding colony at Jamestown to the present.

New Deal Discussed.

At the morning session the institute audience had been told by Dr. Gerhard Colm, of the new School for Social Research in New York that the Roosevelt program of public works appears modest in comparison with the billions involved in the Hitler relief outlays in Germany, "especially if we bear in mind the greater natural resources and the easier international situation of th United States.

The Summer Cinema Continues to Supply Screen Diversion of the First Rank

Four Films to Be Shown Soon Rate Attention

Enlist Distinguished Stars; the Mailman Rings Again; Amusement Notes.

(Reprinted from Yesterday's Last Edition.)

By Nelson B. Bell.

Four important new Paramount pictures have been booked for early local presentation on the screens of Warner Brothers' downtown, first-run houses, according to announcement made yesterday by John J. Payette, general manager of Warner interests in this territory.

The pictures are "Accent on Youth," "College Scandal," "Paris in Spring" and "This Woman Is Mine."

Sylvia Sidney and Herbert Marshall are cast in the principal roles of "Accent on Youth," which is, of course, a film version of the stage success of the same name, with which Washington is familiar by reason of the fact that the play opened the spring season of the National Theater Players while still a current hit on Broadway. Douglas MacLean, son of a former Washington clergyman and himself a local favorite while still an actor, produced the picture for Paramount release.

New College Formula.

"College Scandal" is described as a new sort of college film play from the same productional source that provided the screen with "College Rhythm" and "College Humor." In it a gripping mystery is unfolded against a background of collegiate activities. During the course of the picture, a show is presented within a show as a medium for introducing "In the Middle of a Kiss," a new tune that is said to be destined to annoy the loudspeakers for months to come. Kent Taylor, Arline Judge, Wendy Barrie and William Frawley are cast in the leading roles.

"Paris in Spring" presents Mary Ellis, former star of the Metropolitan Grand Opera Company, as well as a legitimate actress of renown, and Tullio Carminati, leading man with Grace Moore in her sensational "One Night of Love," in the co-stellar roles, supported by Ida Lupino, Lynn Overman, Jessie Ralph and James Blakeley. Four new Gordon and Revel songs are introduced in this subject, which was directed by Lewis Milestone.

Clowns Become Hamlets.

"This Woman Is Mine" is a remarkable film—produced abroad, I believe—because it presents a group of former comedians in a drama of serious character, affording a bit of tangible proof that some clowns can be tragedians, as all aspire to be. This picture has been compared by critics with "Variety," the great silent film in which Emil Jannings was the star. It was directed by Monte Banks, who once labored under the mild delusion that he was a second Charlie Chaplin, and includes in its cast such estimable players as Gregory Ratoff, John Loder, Benita Hume, Katherine Sergava and Richard Bennett.

The Earle and Metropolitan theaters will present these films in addition to the usual flow of product from the Warner Brothers, First National and Columbia studios, which turn out some pretty fair celluloid ribbons on their own account.

As long as we are on the topic of the Warner Brothers local theaters and what's to be seen in them, this may be as good a time as any to call attention to the fact that holiday matinees will be held in all of the neighborhood houses tomorrow, July 4, the birthday of these more or less successful United States of America, at the same moment fumbling around a bit in an attempt to get a new hold on the principles of government that had their birth 159 years ago tomorrow.

These matinees will begin at 2 o'clock and the various attractions in the outlying theaters will be this wise: Ambassador, "Les Miserables;" Apollo, "Mark of the Vampire;" Avalon, "Let 'Em Have It;" Avenue Grand, "In Caliente;" Central, "Strangers All;" Colony, "In Caliente;" Home, "McFadden's Flats;" Savoy, "Eight Bells;" Tivoli, "The Flame Within;" York, "One New York Night." So now you know.

That Postman's Ring, Again.

Mr. Frank Ford Burnet, 1449 Fairmont street northwest, whom you may recognize as one of the more watchful of the Capital's volunteer guardians of the cinema, takes his typewriter on his lap under date of July 2, to lament the fact that Washington is not faring so well as New York in the matter of first-run film bookings.

Mr. Burnet, it seems, has come across a list of the "ten best movies for the first half of 1935," compiled by a Manhattan observer in whose opinion he evidently has faith, and weeps on this department's shoulder because out of the 10 films listed only 7 have been seen here, with one booked for presentation beginning July 12. The two not yet heard from by local screen fans impress my correspondent as alarming evidence of an increasing myopia on the part of the booking powers that be in the Capital.

These two missing masterpieces are, so Mr. Burnet points out, the Ben Hecht-Charlie MacArthur opus, starring Noel Coward, "The Scoundrel," and Gaumont British's "The Man Who Knew Too Much," with Peter Lorre and Nova Pilbeam.

Watch Loew and Belasco.

These seem hardly enough to place the stigma of gross indifference to their duties upon those intrusted with the selection and booking of the Capital's screen fare. However, it will no doubt comfort Mr. Burnet to know that "The Scoundrel" is included upon the list of Paramount releases assigned to the Loew houses in Washington in their split of the product with the Warners. It probably will be shown in some one or another of the Loew theaters on F street in due course. If it is not, that will be a matter for Mr. Burnet to take up with the Loew offices, presided over by Divisional Manager Carter Barron, who presumably will be able to tell him why.

As to "The Man Who Knew Too Much," that was to have been the next feature on the screen of the Belasco Theater when the sudden decision to close the house for the summer was reached. Since the organization headed by Matty Radin has all of the Gaumont British product under contract for Washington, it is not too much to expect that "The Man Who Knew Too Much" will be among the first of the screen plays presented when the Lafayette Square outlet for foreign-made films reopens in the fall.

Both of these pictures, by the way, have been artistic successes in the eyes of the cognoscenti, but not flaming sensations in the eyes of the gentlemen who make up the weekly box-office statements.

Another communication delivered by one of Mr. Farley's patient gray-clad minions brings word from Mabel Van Dyke, one of the mainsprings of the Pierce Hall Players, that she has just received a letter from Betty Souby, of Omaha, Nebr., whose play, "Field of Honor," Miss Van Dyke was instrumental in producing at Pierce Hall a few months ago, in which Miss Souby makes known that "Field of Honor" is to be done again by the Barter Theater of Abingdon, Va., some time the middle of the current month.

"As I think it was largely due to Mr. W. A. Whitney's review in The Post," says Miss Van Dyke, "that Miss Souby was encouraged to put on the play again, I thought this might be of interest to you—and to Mr. Whitney. Another point of interest is that Frank Jamison, who played the leading role of Peter, is going down to Abingdon to play it there."

During the vacation season of the Pierce Hall Players, Miss Van Dyke evidently is enjoying a busman's holiday. A few days ago she trekked out to the Odeon, at Forest Glen, Md., to watch the National Civic Theater Society rehearse "The Bride the Sun Shines On," their second bill, opening tomorrow night, and found Forney Reese directing the play with a baton, of all things! Is this something new, or am I that far behind the times? (This is a purely rhetorical question and requires no answer, just to beat you to it!) Anyhow, the piece ought to have rhythm.

Spirit of Show Business.

There is more of the comedy, pathos and poignant drama of show business in one evening of these auditions that are being held for principals in "Going Native," the all-Washington revue to be staged at Loew's Fox early in August, than can be encountered in a season of conventionally rehearsed stage plays.

Sprinkled about among the youngsters who really "have something" and obviously are going places are the nervous tenors who crack on their high notes in an overanxious effort to outdo Caruso in the "Donna e Mobile" number; the clever roller skaters, nothing but kids the two of them—one a tall boy, the other a fragile blonde—who take a couple of hard bumps because the floor of the National stage isn't just right for their kind of pastiming; the ambitious young acrobatic dancer, who misses a front-over or two, but goes on to a rousing hit with the non-paying audience nevertheless; the earnest lad who tears into Kipling's "Boots" with a conception of the tempo and meter of the piece that will roll you in the aisles, just as it did me—the list could go on all night, as the auditions themselves almost do.

Pity the Pianist.

It is no joy ride for the accompanist either. That patient soul is expected to transpose anything set on the music rack at sight and make it put the singer over, whether the singer has anything to "get over" or not. In fairness, most of them have.

Then there are the instrumentalities, the hula dancer who executes her entire routine behind the guitarist who twangs and sings an Hawaiian song as accompaniment for her undulating torso-tossing—I was sitting next Director Gene Ford while all this was going on and we haven't seen the gal do her grass-skirted hip-hurling yet, confound it! —the sepia toe-dancer, who really seems to have a yen for the ballet, the ballroom dancers, who get a little in each other's way, and the tenor who decides that his song isn't so hot and so quits it in the middle and goes into his dance—which isn't so torrid either.

In all of this effort—some distinctly promising, some utterly futile—there shows through the deadly seriousness of young people determined to make the grade and willing to attempt anything, whether they are quite ready or not, to get a start.

It is a fine spirit—a spirit that filled the National stage with eager aspirants for recognition last night and the seats out front with an audience equally eager to bestow favor on those whose abilities warranted it.

Out of it all, rest assured, will come the best of the "Going Native" revues to date. And that will be a very engaging "Going Native" revue, indeed.

Miss Phoebe Steffy, who acquitted herself so notably in Constance Connor Brown's production of "The Doll's House," at Wardman Park last season, has joined the Player Community at Woodside, Mass., for the summer. Miss Steffy was awarded a scholarship in recognition of her outstanding work as one of the Capital's most promising young actresses. She received her star at College Park a year or two ago as a member of the dramatic club of the University of Maryland. In order to accept the summer's work with the Woodside group, Miss Steffy was forced to relinquish the role of "Trilby" in the production of the play planned by the Roadside Theater for August production.

Fun in the Open.

Fourth of July always one of the liveliest days at Glen Echo Park, promises to live up to its reputation again this year. In addition to the usual number of picnics, swimming, dancing and fifty other major features will provide recreation for thousands.

Crystal Pool, with 3,000 capacity, will attract swimmers who appreciate a swim rendezvous offering five outstanding features: deep water basin, shallow swimming area, diving basin, kiddie pool and seashore sand beach. The pool is open daily from 9:30 a. m. to 11:30 p. m.

Tomorrow night, in the Spanish Garden Ballroom, David McWilliams will present a special musical program in observance of Independence Day, and Phil O'Brien, director of the orchestra, and his ace entertainers will offer something novel in lilting dance music.

In anticipation of the holiday crowds, all the rides are prepared to supply the thrills for which Glen Echo is famous, including the coaster dips, pretzel, airplane swings, old mill, whip, carrousel and dodgem. The midway of fun has also been readied for celebrants of the Fourth.

All amusements features and rides will open at noon, while the free picnic groves will be ready for picnickers at 9 a. m.

Since you ask, all of the responses that have come to this desk with regard to the possibility of presenting Sean O'Casey's controversial play of "Within the Gates" have been unequivocally in favor of having the open-air performance of the play in Washington this summer. This, it will be recalled, was the suggestion of Frank Baer, local newspaperman, stage director and playwright, who knows how it can be arranged. So far, not a dissenting vote. If that is the community sentiment—as it seemed to be all last season, when we couldn't get the play here as a regular booking—let us have it!

Oh-Say-Can-You-See Note.

All those explosions you will be hearing the next few days won't be blowouts, although a lenient police department probably will construe them as such.

Unless I try to pop one little firecracker, in which case it will be a high crime and misdemeanor with life as the sentence.

Boy, get me a nickel's worth of sparklers with the snappers removed!

"WAITING FOR LEFTY." The New Theater Group of Washington presents the drama in one act and eight scenes by Clifford Odets, produced by Morris Weissberg under the direction of Ross Skopp. In the Auditorium of the National Press Club. Reviewed Tuesday evening by W. A. Whitney.

THE PROGRAM.

1. "DANCE OF THE BLUE EAGLE," created and presented by Harry Skopp.
2. "RECRUIT," a play in one act by M. Leon.
3. "Lo! HEAR THE GENTLE LARK," burlesque of the song, by Harry Skopp.
4. "UPSURGE," a poem by Robert Gessner, read by Rita Castille.
5. "WAITING FOR LEFTY," by Clifford Odets.

"Waiting for Lefty," the provocative drama from the pen of Clifford Odets, author of the equally contentious "Till the Day I Die" and "Awake and Sing," was presented again last evening in the auditorium of the National Press Club by the New Theater Group of Washington before an enthusiastic audience of about 500.

The flamboyant drama of a taxi union about to decide to strike—with dramatic "flash-backs" into the current and antecedent events in the lives of some of the committeemen—was as smoothly presented as last fortnight on the occasion of its local premiere. Presented by the same cast—including David Lyons, Jack Bowden, Rose Skopp (who also directed), Max Milton, Elsie R. Singer, John Carroll, Robert Levins, Sam El, David Goldfarb—"Waiting for Lefty" offers 50 minutes of tense drama, without comedy, but replete with stark realism, punctuated with lines of straight-forward English undisguised with euphemisms.

Old and New Auxiliaries.

Preceding the Odets play, "Dance of the Blue Eagle," created and presented by Harry Skopp—a routine more a burlesque on the Cleopatra and the asp yarn than a slam at the late lamented bird—and "Upsurge," a dramatic poem by Robert Gessner and, despite bending to the extreme left in its anti-everything propaganda, effectively read by Rita Castille, were repeated from the earlier occasion.

"Recruit," a one-act play by M. Leon, written (at least, read) in too obvious tetrameter, was performed locally for the first time, with David Lyons as the capitalistic captain, Sam El as the proletarian private, and David Goldfarb as the conscientious striker.

Also new to this event was Mr. Skopp's burlesque of a very dramatic coloratura soprano rendering the famed "Lo! Hear the Gentle Lark."

Morris Weissberg, in general charge of the Group's producing activities, briefly prefaced the evening's performance with a few remarks on the Group's aims and acted as master of ceremonies.

Hollywood

By Sidney Skolsky

Hollywood, July 3.

GRACE MOORE can be viewed quickly, accurately, by this yarn: A producer wanted her to sing and act his way. She refused. He said, "You're acting like a prima donna." But I am a prima donna," she answered.

Starting with the fact that she is a prima donna, Grace Moore becomes understandable, although prima donnas like to be misunderstood.

Their preparation, their work, their career give them the chance to be temperamental, and they take advantage of it. Miss Moore doesn't like to be talked to on the day of a singing performance, and it is then that she is most likely to fly into a temper.

She has her right to her moods. She is far less temperamental than many movie actresses with far less talent.

• • • •

It was her second ambition to become a singer. Her first desire was to become a missionary and live in China. It was after she heard Mary Garden sing at a concert in Nashville that she, too, wanted to be a great singer.

There are only two American opera stars honored with a gold plaque bearing their names in the entrance hall of the Opera Comique, Paris. The two Americans are Mary Garden and Grace Moore.

She was born in Jellico, Tenn.—a small town at the foot of the Cumberland Mountains—on December 5, 1901. She has blue eyes, a body conditioned like a trained athlete, and blonde hair. Earlier photographs disclose her hair to be brunette.

• • • •

IT is not easy to be a canary. Miss Moore is almost a bird in a gilded cage.

She takes a singing lesson every day with Dr. P. M. Marafioti, who has been her teacher for the last 12 years. She has a repertoire of over 200 songs in five languages. She speaks Spanish with her husband, French with her maid, Italian with her teacher, and English—with a Southern accent—to her colored cook.

She has a special foot massage and manicure every day. She has to watch her voice and her weight. She is generally always on a diet. She drinks only rare vintage wines, and is an authority on them. She used to smoke a little during vacations, but is now entirely off the weed. She leaves a party when the smoke gets thick.

• • • •

She plays a fair game of golf and tennis. She rides well, but prefers swimming, claiming it is the best exercise for a singer. She does many strange exercises about the house to keep in trim. One afternoon, during the filming of "Love Me Forever," Director Victor Schertzinger visited her.

He found Miss Moore on her hands and knees climbing up a flight of stairs and singing. She told him this was how she practiced voice range. He thought it was cute and had a scene written into the flicker showing her doing this. It was eliminated from "Love Me Forever" because the flicker was overlength.

Her early career was not a song and dance. When she first came to New York to be an opera star, she lived in Greenwich Village and sang in a restaurant called the Black Cat. Her first appearance on Broadway, some years later, was in Raymond Hitchcock's "Hitchy-Koo" in 1922. It took place on Thanksgiving night.

• • • •

SHE was Julia Sanderson's understudy. Miss Sanderson had had too much turkey and couldn't go on. It wasn't the usual movie musical of the understudy who was a sensation overnight. Julia Sanderson resumed her role the next evening.

She lost her voice during her career. It looked for a while as if she would have to give up being a singer.

She is married to Valentin Parera. He is well known in Spanish talkies. She met Parera while going to Europe on the Ile de France. He picked up a rolling backgammon man for her and it was love at first sight. They were married in the city hall at Cannes on July 15, 1931.

• • • •

She claims that he is mainly responsible for all her new success. He persuaded her to try pictures again, after she had failed. He is her severest critic, and his word is almost law to her. She says she is romantically and passionately in love with him.

She never has flowers in her bedroom—or her dressing room—on the days she is to sing. She says that they "eat up the voice."

Her favorite outdoor sport is getting sun-tanned. She takes sun baths and tries to keep an even brown all over. There'll be more about Miss Moore in tomorrow's column.

"Baby Star" Begins to Shine

It is customary for the WAMPAS "baby stars" to make good on the screen in a big way and GiGi Parrish, the wideawake young woman pictured above, is no exception to the rule. Miss Parrish hails from Cambridge, Mass., and was educated in private schools in New England and abroad, including the Ecole Superieure de Jeunes Filles in Switzerland. She launched her professional career with the Laguna Beach Community Players, at Laguna Beach, Calif., and has appeared inconspicuously in many important films. She now is cast in B. P. Schulberg's "Kiss and Make Up," at Paramount.

Red Sox Pound Three Hurlers, Turn Back Nats Again, 14-7

Errors Help Tigers Top Indians

Two Tallies in Seventh Break Tie; Hurlers Pounded Hard.

By the Associated Press.

DETROIT, July 3.—The Detroit Tigers, aided by four errors by Roy Hughes, of Cleveland, took the Tribe into camp today, 11-7. It was the Tigers third straight victory over the erstwhile second-place holders.

Hughes threw the ball wide twice and booted two grounders, contributing to five Tiger runs.

It was a bad day for the hurling staffs of both clubs. Hildebrand and Sorrell were the starters. Sorrell was yanked for Sullivan in the second after Cleveland jumped into a three-run lead. Hildebrand left in the third and was replaced by Brown. Pearson finished for Cleveland and Cochrane called on Hogsett to twirl the last two frames.

Campbell's double in the first inning opened the scoring when it brought home Galatzer and Knickerbocker who had singled. A double by Knickerbocker accounted for another run in the second.

Tigers Bunch Hits.

Peter Fox opened the Tigers half of the second with a single and Hayworth, who was backstopping for the Tigers, banged out a single to score him. Hayworth had a big day, with a double, triple and two singles in five trips to the plate. He drove in five runs.

The Tigers bunched four hits in the third, which with a walk and a Hughes error, went for four runs. Two hits, a passed ball and Berger's mishandling of a grounder accounted for two more in the fifth.

Cleveland came back in the seventh to even the score with a three-run rally on two hits and a pair of walks. But the Tigers returned in their half to score two more, largely on Hughes' wild throw with two Tigers aboard.

Hughes wound up his performance in the eighth with a wild heave to the outfield that advanced Greenberg and Rogell, who had singled, into scoring position. Hayworth brought them home with a single.

Corbett to Fight Brouillard Today

By the Associated Press.

San Francisco, July 3.—Lou Brouillard and Young Corbett, two bustling left-handed exponents of the southpaw boxing stance and outstanding challengers for the middleweight title, will match ring craftsmanship here tomorrow for ten rounds.

Not since "Tiger" Flowers knocked out Johnny Wilson in 1924 have two such highly rated unorthodox stylists crawled through the ropes here. The encounter will provide a highlight of San Francisco's July Fourth celebration.

Between them, the two have held three championships. Brouillard, chunky French-Canadian from Worcester, Mass., won and lost the welterweight and middleweight crowns during a fairly short but bristling career and has since steadily punched his way back toward another crack at the latter title.

Detroiter Faces Hardest Puncher in Career at Chisox Park.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, July 3.—Silent, solemn Joe Louis, having blasted the Man Mountain from Italy, is going bombing for the big Kingfish.

The sensational Detroit Negro youth, who, in 12 months, clambered from nowhere to a ranking contender for the world's heavyweight championship, today was matched for a ten-round battle with King Lavinsky, Chicago's wallloping ex-fish peddler, at Comiskey Park, home of the White Sox, on the night of August 7.

Both Louis and Levinsky, scowling at each other, were present at the meeting. Also present were Promoter Joe Foley, Mike Jacobs, head of the Twentieth Century Sporting Club of New York, which has an option on Louis' services, and "Leaping Lena" Levy, the Kingfish's sister.

Will Seat 68,000.

The ball park will be arranged for a 68,000 seating capacity, with a possible gate of $150,000. Ringside seats will sell for $10, with others down to $2.40.

Louis, most sensational fighter to crash the heavyweight picture since Jack Dempsey, has a tremendous following in Chicago, where he made his professional debut a year ago and fought most of his battles. It was his knockout of Lee Ramage here last winter that started him skyrocketing to a match with Primo Carnera, whom he battered to defeat in six rounds a week ago. In 23 professionat fights Louis has won 19 by knockouts.

Lazzeri Scores Home Run; Allen Gives 5 Blows.

By the Associated Press.

Philadelphia, July 3.—A home run by Tony Lazzeri turned the tide of a pitching duel between Johnny Allen and Roy Mahaffey in favor of the Yankees and led to a 2-to-0 victory over the Athletics.

Mahaffey allowed only four hits, but in addition to the homer he gave a hit to Jesse Hill in the eighth, nicked Lou Gehrig with a piched ball and loaded the sacks by walking George Selkirk after Lazzeri had sacrificed. A force-out produced the second run. Allen was touched for five blows and struck out eight, fanning Bob Johnson four times and Jimmie Foxx twice.

Chisox Seeking Cuyler, Out As a Cub

Veteran, 36, Is Released After National Clubs Waive on Him.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, July 2.—Hazen "Kiki" Cuyler, veteran outfielder with the Chicago Cubs, given his unconditional release today, may continue to wear the spangles of a Chicago club in major league warfare.

J. Louis Comiskey, owner of the White Sox, tonight telegraphed the veteran star in Cincinnati that he was interested in obtaining his services.

The veteran star, who spent 8 of the 14 years in the majors with the Cubs, was released in Cincinnati after all other National League clubs had waived on his services. He is 36 years old.

Building Young Club.

In letting Cuyler go, Manager Charlie Grimm pointed out that the action was along the youth-building lines the Chicago club has been following for the last two years. Grimm said:

"Cuyler was no longer valuable to us as a regular. As starters I preferred to use the youngsters, Frank Demaree and "Tuck" Stainback. We're building a young club and Cuyler was along in years."

With Hack Wilson, former National League home-run king and now a member of the Albany club of the International League, and Riggs (Old Hoss) Stephenson, who is pounding the ball at a .366 clip for Indianapolis, of the American Association, Cuyler helped make up one of the most efficient and colorful outfields in baseball history.

Wilson's 56 home runs set the pace in 1929 as the trio hammered the Cubs into the National League pennant. Cuyler hit above .300 six of the eight years he spent with the Chicago club. His lifetime average in the majors is .313. His batting mark this season is .268.

German Ace Will Oppose Fred Perry, Winner Over Crawford.

By the Associated Press.

WIMBLEDON, England, July 3.—Donald Budge, California's flaming redhead, went down with colors flying today and left the all-England tennis championship to Fred Perry, of Great Britain, and Baron Gottfried von Cramm, of Germany.

Over-matched but not outfought, the 19-year-old American gave the talented Von Cramm, generally rated the world's greatest amateur, a bitter battle before bowing out in the semifinals, 4—6, 6—4, 6—3, 6—2.

Perry, the defending champion and peer of them all for two years, gained the right to face Von Cramm in the finals Friday by subduing his old rival, Jack Crawford, of Australia, 6—2, 3—6, 6—4, 6—4.

Women Defend United States

Tomorrow's program will be marked chiefly by the semifinal round of women's singles where Helen Jacobs and Helen Wills Moody, America's two surviving standard bearers, meet Hilda Krahwinkel Sperling, of Germany, and Joan Hartigan, of Australia, respectively.

Budge's defeat removed America's final hope for the title which players from the United States have won five times since the war. The gallery of 18,000, however, saw their young idol put up a brilliant fight against Von Cramm, with the Teuton's skill and experience eventually proving the deciding factors.

At the outset it appeared as if Budge might give the form players another jolt, just as he had in eliminating Christian Boussus, of France, and H. W. (Bunny) Austin, of England, in the earlier rounds. He broke through Von Cramm's service in the seventh game of the first set to lead, 4—3, and then won his own service twice at love for the set.

Makes One Rally.

But after one sizzling rally in the second set, in which he pulled up even at 4—4, the Californian was outmaneuvered and outplayed. Von Cramm was in top form and booming untouchable returns across the net. Budge, too, fell into an epidemic of errors and they proved costly. His cause was hopeless when he began finding the net with his returns in the latter stages of the match.

After this tense duel, Perry's businesslike and confident handling of Crawford looked exactly like something most of the crowd had seen somewhere before. So much so, in fact, that one wisecracker remarked in the course of a long baseline rally, "This is where I came in last year."

It was the champion's eighth victory in 11 meetings with Crawford.

Perry Conceded Edge.

Although Von Cramm played superb tennis in the last three sets of his match with the tenacious Budge, there were few willing to predict he has the game to head off the rollicking, polished Perry in the Briton's own backyard. Should Perry win, he will become the first playing through champion in Wimbledon history to repeat.

Budge, although finally beaten by

Va. Amateurs Miss Par at Cascade

Stubborn Course Balks Players on Eve of State Tourney.

By the Associated Press.

CASCADE CLUB, Hot Springs, Va., July 3.—The Cascade's stubborn par 71 was too tough a nut for Virginia's best amateurs to crack today as they practiced in preparation for tomorrow's qualifying play in the twenty-fifth State amateur golf tournament.

Bobby Riegel, of Richmond, Southern amateur champion, and Morton McCarthy, of Norfolk, Middle Atlantic champion, found their share of trouble over the 6,690-yard layout, while Billy Howell, of Richmond, seeking his fourth State title, was fairly well pleased with his shots as he toured the course in the late afternoon.

These three were the nominal favorites in the field of approximately 90, but all unheralded and all unsung, Alvin Dollins, of Covington, who knows the course like a 9-year-old knows his dog-eared primer, was building up a big following as he added another sensational round to his tournament preparations.

Dollins Gets 71.

He played the course in par-equaling 71 despite a 4 on the short eighteenth and looked back on a creditable 72 yesterday and a fine 72 the preceding day.

Dollins, who won the southwestern Virginia championship, was ineligible for the Southern amateur and the Middle Atlantic, but he looked not only eligible but positively dangerous as he roamed the mountain-encased Cascades course on even terms with par.

He stroked his putts with deadly precision in the manner of Riegel, the sensational 19-year-old shotmaker whose tournament experience and coolness under fire rated heavily in his favor.

It was over this same course that Riegel last year won the Middle Atlantic title which he couldn't defend at Virginia Beach this spring when he failed to make the qualifying grade.

The 32 low scores will qualify for the championship division tomorrow and will be reduced to 8 in the preliminary and first-round matches Friday. Quarter-final and semifinal matches will be played Saturday with the 36-hole finals Sunday.

8 Marks Fall In Meet at Lincoln

Prep Runner Unofficially Betters World's High Hurdle Time.

2 Maryland Men Score; Clark, of Richmond, Sets Record.

By the Associated Press.

LINCOLN, Nebr., July 3.—Leroy Kirkpatrick, a California prep school youngster competing for the Olympic Club of San Francisco, scissored over the 110-meter high hurdles in the world record equaling time of 14.2 seconds today, but was thwarted of recognition by a stiff wind in the junior track and field championship of the Amateur Athletic Union, in the University of Nebraska Stadium.

Kirkpatrick was not the only sufferer, for seven other meet marks were improved and two were equaled, and only record performances in the field events were recognized. The tall Californian's loss, however, was the biggest, for he had tied the world standard, established by Percy Beard, of the N. Y. A. C. at Oslo, Norway, last summer.

Woodrow Clark, of the University of Richmond, established a new javelin record with a toss of 213 feet 8½ inches. Others from the South Atlantic area who scored included Bill Guckeyson and Coleman Headley, both of the University of Maryland. Guckeyson took second in the javelin with a throw of 207 feet, while Headley was third in the 800-meter run.

Everett Misses Finals.

Abernathy of North Carolina, was fourth in the finals of the 110 meter hurdles. Grover Everett, University of Virginia track captain placed third in a qualifying heat, but did not reach the finals.

Kirkpatrick, a hurdling stylist, won decisively over Forest Towns of the University of Georgia, who had won his trial heat in 14.4 seconds to beat the meet mark of 14.8 seconds set by Al Moreau, of Louisiana State Unievrsity in the 1933 meet at Chicago. The California ace also broke the meet record in the trials, winning his heat in 14.5 seconds.

Six of the record performances, officials announced, will stand, the 10-mile an hour breeze having been of no help to their makers.

New Jump Record.

Newell Rushforth, a tall youth fro mthe University of Utah, representing the Salt Lake City Chamber of Commerce, cleared 6 feet, 5⅝ inches in the high jump, to displace the old junior mark established by Cornell Cooped, of Pittsburgh, at Chicago in 1933.

Big Chester Cruikshank, of the Denver A. C., not only came up with a meet record performance of 153 feet 6 inches in the discus throw, but was the only double winner of the day. Before wrecking the discus mark of 148 feet 2⅛ inches, set up by J. C. Petty, of the Texas Neighborhood A. C.

A new pole vault standard of 13 feet 7⅜ inches was divided between William Roy, of Loyola, at New Orleans, and Jack Maugher, University of California star, who competed for the Olympic Club. Stanley Johnson, of M. I. T., competing for the Posse A. C. of Boston, leaped 24 feet 11 inches, more than two inches better than the meet record.

Chisox Catch Browns, Emerge Victors, 5-3

Chicago, July 3 (AP).—After spotting an old jinx, Dick Coffman, three runs in the first inning, the White Sox pounded him for ten hits in six innings and gained a 5-to-3 victory over the St. Louis Browns in the finale of their abbreviated series today.

Wise Duke Takes Arlington Feature

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, July 3.—Wise Duke, 2-year-old son of Wise Counsellor—Desire, reveled in the heavy going at Arlington Park today and scored in the feature race at 5½ furlongs by a half length.

Wise Duke, owned by H. H. Hector, won over the Bomar Stable's Night Play, the pacemaker, under a hustling ride by Eddie Arcaro.

The Coldstream Studs' Coldstream, the public choice, finished third.

Giants Beaten By Pitcher's Home Run

Davis' Smash in Tenth Defeats National Leaders, 4-3.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, July 3.—Curt Davis set the Giants back on their heels in two different ways today and led the Phillies to a precedent-smashing ten-inning victory over the Giants, 4 to 3. Among other things it was the first game the league leaders have lost on their own grounds to an Eastern club this season.

The Philly pitcher, hampered by a sore arm earlier this season, not only limited the Giants to seven hits but won his own game in the tenth with a home run. It was his first circuit swat this year and the twelfth off Hubbell in 18 games.

Hubbell, seeking his tenth victory, got off to a bad start when the Phils scored twice in the opening inning on a series of scratch hits and an error. Ethan Allen started with a Texas League double; George Watkins singled just inside first and Gus Mancuso, trying to pick Allen off second, heaved the ball into center field. John Moore was passed, filling the bases, then Dolph Camilli bounced a hit off Hubbell's glove to bring in one run and Mike Haslin's fly scored another.

Camilli Gets Sixteenth.

The slender southpaw didn't allow another run until the sixth, when Camilli belted his sixteenth homer of the season. Meanwhile the Giants had picked up a run in the second on a hit batsman, a single, a force-play and an error and then tied the count in the sixth when Hank Leiber lined out his eleventh homer of the year behind a single by Mel Ott.

Myer Streak Is Halted at 21 Games

Cronin's 2 Triples Aid in Attack on Hadley, Burke and Kress.

Washington's 12 Blows Prove Insufficient; Foes Get 13.

By Shirley L. Povich.
A Staff Correspondent.

BOSTON, July 3.—The Red Sox were shut out today—in the fifth inning. In every other inning they prodded Washington's so-called pitchers for runs in various quantities and the Nats accumulated the third straight defeat of their current losing streak.

Irving Hadley, Bob Burke and Red Kress pitched a 13-hit game at the Red Sox, garnished by eight bases on balls and spiced by a pair of wild pitches. The upshot of it all was a 14-7 defeat for the Nats.

Washington reached Johnny Welch for a dozen hits, but the Nats couldn't keep pace with their own pitching. Hadley sent the Red Sox off to a three-run lead in the first inning and when the Nats went ahead with four runs in the second, the Sox drew abreast immediately and in the fourth inning stepped out to an 8-4 lead.

Kress Hit Hard, Too.

Bobby Burke was rushed to Hadley's rescue in the fourth, pitched a pair of two-base hits at the Red Sox almost immediately, and was mercifully removed two innings later. Kress finished up the game in a blaze of ignominy, surrendering six hits and five runs in the last two innings.

Manager Joe Cronin of the Red Sox was no inconspicuous factor in the rout of his dad-in-law's ball team. He inserted a pair of three-base hits into the proceedings at odd intervals, but he was forced to yield the hitting honors to Roy Johnson, who checked in with two doubles and a single before it was all over.

The last measure of grief came to the Nats when Buddy Myer failed to make even one of the Nats' 12 hits, thus terminating a consecutive-game hitting streak which had reached 21 games.

Cronin's triple with two on base was the pivotal blow of the first inning when the Sox took their 3-0 lead, but the Nats bounced back with four runs in the second to put Hadley in front, 4-3. Travis and Schulte singled, Bolton drilled a long triple to right, and Hadley singled as the Nats' own attack began to function.

Hadley promptly blew his one-run lead, the Sox tying the score in the second inning with the aid of a walk to Welch, Melillo's single, misjudged by Schulte, a wild pitch and two more walks that forced the tying run across.

Hadley's inability to keep base-

Five Trainers Suspended, 23 Horses Barred at Charles Town

Action Taken In 'Doping' Cases

By Walter Haight.
A Staff Correspondent.

CHARLES TOWN RACE TRACK, July 3.—Five trainers were suspended and 23 horses barred here this afternoon following the chemist's reports of wholesale stimulating. In the majority of cases the saliva tests showed the presence of strychnine, and all the horses involved were winners.

The men suspended and whose cases were referred to the West Virginia racing commission for further action are E. White, trainer of Best Butter; H. Williams, trainer of Altus Nubus; C. A. Cranford, trainer of Light Action; F. W. Bennett, who handles Lady Lawyer, and H. McLoud, trainer of Southland Lad. Light Action had been found stimulated early in the meeting.

List of Horses Barred.

The horses in charge of the suspended trainers will be barred until placed in hands suitable to the stewards. The horses are Finger Tips, Ease In, Cherry Lass, Busy Master, Southland Lad, Mere Wave, Major Accident, Wishing Star, By Surprise, Rose Marie B., Golden Play, Light Action, Pepper Patch, Lady Buck, Altus Nubus, Annah Grannite, Miss Skies, Best Butter, Bunky, Dress Maker, Miss Mooker, Cora Kay and Lady Lawyer.

Three trainers had been suspended for "doping" earlier in the meeting.

The veteran rider, Ralph Hilley, piloted Aella to victory in the fifth and feature race of the day, but both horse and jockey were "all out," as the horsemen say, to take the decision from Sunny Susan, a long shot. In fact, backers of Aella were ready to tear up their tickets with the horses midway in the stretch and Sunny Susan galloping in front. However, Aella developed a closing punch that carried her to the wire a head in front. Toast Master, third most of the way, finished in the show position in the field of eight answering the call for the five-furlong battle.

Conditions Are Ideal.

Ideal racing conditions again prevailed and the horses were flirting with the track records throughout the afternoon.

The daily double consisted of a pair of aces, the "No. 1" horses in the first and third races being the medium of a $71.80 mutuel. The combination was that of Good Gracious and Radial.

Shanks rode two winners to cling to the lead in the race for jockey honors. His closest rivals, Smith and Hilley, had one winner each. The score stands: Shanks, 31; Hilley, 29, and Smith, 27.

The day's betting showed a decided increase, $45,638 passing through the mutuel machines.

Mary Cootes Trims Sara Moore, 8-6, 6-3, For Tennis Title

Virginia Girl Victorious With Rally

Also Annexes Share in Doubles Crown With Bobsey Turney.

By George Considine.

A RATHER frail-looking young woman named Mary Cootes showed up at the Columbia Country Club yesterday, knocked the nap off 17,384 tennis balls and left wearing a corsage of District tennis titles. But, as the Fuller Brush man probably wouldn't say, that's just scratching at the surface.

In a slugging match that put to shame some of the recent exhibitions of the ungentle sex, Miss Cootes, Old Dominion champion, came from behind to whip the dynamic Sara Moore, 8—6, 6—3, for the District singles championship.

After a brief rest, the long, tall star paired with diminutive Bobsey Turney and slapped out a bristling thrill-packed 4—6, 7—5, 6—1 win over Sara Moore and Dorette Miller. The clean sweep of the two tournaments parallel Barney Welsh's feat of last Sunday.

Overcomes Lead.

At the start of the singles fray, Sara Moore pounded the Smith College acette with thundering power drives to lead at 5—3. Known to be a late starter, Miss Cootes slowly but steadily revealed why she is champ of Ole Virginnny.

She bounced that crushing forehand drive on the lines so often that Sara thought she was caught in a smoke screen. Then, to prove that she wasn't a "one-puncher," Miss Cootes displayed extraordinary proficiency both off the portside and over head.

With match point against her, however, Miss Moore twice brought the gallery to its feet by a thumping passing shot and a screaming ace. But the spurt came a little late, for Miss Cootes, stroking with unprecedented vigor, just wasn't to be denied.

Great Uphill Battle.

The highlight of the doubles final was the sterling performance of Mrs. Bobsey Turney, who with various partners has captured more team titles than all the other women combined. It was Mrs. Turney's generalship that enabled her side to engineer the greatest uphill battle ever seen locally.

One set down and standing at 1—3 in the second, Bobsey ran out 4 points in a row to give her and the singles champion a fighting chance. That was enough to muster the Cootes killing power. And with the intensity of a hurricane Turney and Cootes went on to triumph.

"Unless something now unforeseen develops, sale of the Braves to the O'Malleys will be announced Friday. Judge Fuchs has agreed to furnish certain additional information desired. There will be a further meeting Friday and we expect the sale will be announced then."

The Traveler also quoted Charles D. O'Malley as saying, "nothing was consummated at today's conference, but in all probability something will soon develop."

Let's Go Fishing . . .

By M. W. Meier.

JULY the Fourth anglers can just about hit any spot on the river, Chesapeake Bay or the ocean and anticiptae nice hauls. The big trouble will be to find a boat—most of them have been engaged as far ahead as Sunday.

The Potomac still has a few rocks in the neighborhood of the Little Falls. Catfish are plentiful. There also are plenty of black bass and calicos. The canal has pike for the persistent caster.

Farther up, near the headwaters, there are plenty of small and large mouth bass.

The Shenandoah, the Rapidan, Roanoke, Cow Pasture and Jackson rivers are reported in fair shape. Only bass are fishable now in these streams, so fishermen must be careful what they land. In the coastal streams, of course, rock fish are in season.

Chesapeake Bay is full of croakers, many weaks and no end of blues. Drum, both black and red are also being caught about the lower bay. A few large black bonito or sergeant fish also have been landed in the last few days in the neighborhood of Gloucester and Messick, Va.

Fair weather is forecast for the holiday.

Put a red ring around July 23 on your calendar! That date marks the next motion picture show we will give our readers. Not all the films are in yet, but you can depend on it we'll offer a longer and a better program than we had last week.

Seth Gordon, president of American Game Protective Association, has donated one film on steelhead trout fishing in the world-famed Rogue River of Oregon. Field and Stream is sending down some full-sized pictures on musky, pike and bass. The event of the evening will be a sea thriller—more about that later.

Fred Orsinger, of the Bureau of Fisheries aquarium, wants to keep his aquarium open before and after the show, so anglers can see his fine collection of finny pets.

Wind Spoils Bay.

A bad wind from the northwest and rather rough water, spoiled bay fishing Tuesday for most anglers. Only a few fish were caught, and these largely at the end of the day when the wind subsided.

Only five blues were caught on Southwest Middles yesterday, according to reports. A local party comprising Larry Moore, Courtland Marcey and Paul Ward, went out with Capt. Rob Drury and landed these, with a few croakers.

There were no reports yesterday from Ocean City, but from Wachapreague came the statement that they had been "slaying" big channel bass there the last few days. If you like channel bass fishing you'll get a thrill out of the way they catch them at this popular spot. The boats are anchored almost in the surf and the angler lets his bait drop right over into the breakers.

Basic prices on boats there are $6 for an entire day for one person and $2 for each extra person.

Figures Don't Lie.

Miss Esther Dodd, of the Bureau of Fisheries, has just made an interesting compilation of the number of angling licenses issued in the United States last year. The total was exactly 4,855,945, issued to both sexes!

The income to State game departments was $6,586,810.18. Michigan, California, New York, Pennsylvania and Indiana led all the other States in the number issued. Virginia issued 125,000-odd, Maryland only 15,805. West Virginia beat both States with a total of 144,124, with an additional 4,880 issued to women.

whether he can "take it." Levinsky, wild but effective swinger, is expected to provide the answer. He has fought them all and dumped a few into the rosin, including Jack Sharkey, Tommy Loughran and Mickey Walker.

After signing, Levinsky took his 206-pound hulk to Tomahawk, Wis., to rough it for two weeks.

The Kingfish bellowed loud remarks as to what he was going to do to Louis, then whispered:

"Say, who do you think can punch the hardest, Baer or Lewis?"

Levinsky was thinking about that night last winter when Max Baer knocked him out in two sensational rounds. It was the first time he'd ever hit the canvas.

attempts, "well—there'll be two of us after the record."

Within the next few weeks Cobb will try to better a flock of endurance speed records in Utah, most of which are now held by Ab Jenkins, of Salt Lake City. He is particularly desirous of bettering Jenkins' 127 m. p. h. average for a 24-hour grind.

Meanwhile, he and his staff of technicians will survey the salt beds thoroughly, to see if officials of the American Automobile Association are correct in their belief that a "perfect" 13-mile straightaway exists there for attempts at the measured mile. Reports on the straightaway will be sent to Sir Malcolm, preparatory to his August attempts.

If Cobb finds, during his endurance tests, that the salt beds—about 120 miles west of Salt Lake City—provide the proper speedway, he will return to England and begin financing a measured-mile expedition for 1936. He and a British oil company will build a speed car somewhat similar to Campbell's champion Bluebird. That's the way Cobb's smaller Napier-Railton endurance car and the current expedition was financed. The endurance expedition will cost about $50,000, Cobb said, but an attempt at the measured mile would approach $150,000.

Procurement Wins Federal Loop Flag

Team Pounds Out 15-2 Victory Over G. P. O.

Pounding two G. P. O. pitchers for 14 hits, the Procurement Division ball club clinched the first half championship in the Federal League of the Post Sandlot Association yesterday with a 15-to-2 victory. While his teammates went on three lengthy scoring sprees, featured by an eight-run assault in the fifth, Pitcher Eno of the winners was holding the Printers to six scattered bingles. Tortorice, Procurement catcher, led the attack with two homers and a single. Zueller and Baker of the winners also hit for the circuit.

the player who, Big Tilden for one, thinks is the world's greatest amateur, left an indelible impression on British fans. There is hardly a precedent for his feat in eliminating such stars as Boussus and Austin and reaching the semifinals in his first appearance at Wimbledon.

His play has been so consistently good that tennis critics believe he will be given a singles berth on the American Davis Cup team for the forthcoming interzone final against either Germany or Czechoslovakia. Originally Joseph W. Wear, captain of the American team, planned to use Wilmer Allison and Sidney Wood in singles with Allison and Van Ryn as the most likely doubles combination. Budge and Gene Mako, of Los Angeles, youngsters of the team, were regarded originally only as a possible doubles combination.

Speculation on tomorrow's semi-finals in the women's division centered around Miss Jacobs' match with Mme. Sperling. The German girl, who has lived in Denmark since here marriage, hasn't dropped a set since the Wimbledon tournament of last year when she was beaten in the fourth round by Miss Hartigan, 6—4, 5—7, 6—4.

Mrs. Moody Is Favorite.

Miss Hartigan, on the other hand, has been forced to three sets in each of the four matches she has played. Mrs. Moody, who signalized a return to form in her decisive conquest of Mme. Rene Mathieu, of France, in the quarter-finals, was the betting favorite tonight with the duel between Miss Jacobs and Mme. Sperling regarded as a toss-up.

America suffered two setbacks in doubles play today as Allison and Miss Jacobs, seeded fourth in mixed doubles, were eliminated in the fourth round by F. H. D. Wilde and Kay Stammers, of England, 6—3, 3—6, 6—4, and Mrs. Dorothy Andrus, of Stamford, Conn., and Mme. Sylvia Henroth, of France, the top-seeded pair in women's doubles, were ousted by Evelyn Dearman and Nancy Lyle, of Great Britain, 6—3, 6—4, in a third-round match.

Protests Dropped By Valley League

Directors Give Approval to All Players.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Harrisonburg, Va., July 3.—Valley League directors, meeting here last night, approved all players who have performed in the circuit and threw out all protests based on ineligible players, thus insuring peace in the circuit and the continuance of a successful season.

The protests were based on a technical interpretation of the by-laws which hold that players who performed in class C ball two years ago are ineligible. The protests arose over one player on the Charlottesville and Heurich clubs.

Front Royal, the league leaders, which withdrew last week and then reconsidered, and all of the other clubs were in a peaceful mood and decided that the league must go on. All clubs will engage in double-headers tomorrow.

Regatta Draws Yachtsmen to Capes

Races of All Classes Begin at Hampton This Morning.

By the Associated Press.

HAMPTON, Va., July 3.—Yachting enthusiasts brought their craft to Virginia waters here tonight for the formal opening tomorrow morning of the Hampton Yacht Club's annual regatta, now ranked as one of the best in the country. The races will continue through Saturday when the Virginia Gold Cup event, classic of the regatta and a "tune-up" for the President's Cup races on the Potomac, will be run.

The longest race held in connection with the regatta, inaugurated this year as a special feature, was scheduled to get under way this evening from a starting line near the Baltimore Light, 2 miles east of Gibson Island, Md. The finish line is laid out from Old Point Comfort Lighthouse and the light on Fort Wool Island, and the boats are expected to end their cruise tomorrow afternoon or evening if the wind is favorable.

Log Canoes Popular.

A revival of interest has been evidenced in the log canoes, with some 15 of them entered.

Jack Rutherford, of New York, with his new craft, "Big Buster," is regarded as a dangerous contender in the Gold Cup race, which offers for the winner the Horace E. Dodge trophy, highly prized by yachtsmen. "Delphine IV.," former President's Cup winner, will be piloted by Bill Horn, and Mrs. Delphine Dodge Baker's "Delphine VII." Again will be piloted by Walter Leveau.

Blue Ridge Mountain Tourney Opens Today

Buskey's Mark of .408 Leads Interstate Loop

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Cumberland, Md., July 3.—A perfect day at bat—two singles and a triple in three trips to the plate—fattened Joe Buskey's batting average to the extent of 38 points, and latest figures of the Interstate League show that the manager and shortstop of the Potomac-Edison Club is now the six-club loop's leading individual swatsmith with a mark of .408 in 49 trips to the plate.

U. S. Golden Glovers, Beaten By Britishers, Aid Good Will

By Paul Gallico.

A Special Correspondent.

NEW YORK, July 3.—The first international Amateur Golden Glove matches might be listed as a complete success except for the American boxers, and even they had their unique measure of triumph. They are the first athletes in the history of boxing to make a group of British fighters look good. But they played an even more important part than that. I believe truly that they are the first group of athletes in all the history of international boxing that ever really contributed to what is known as international good will.

The American kids may well be proud of themselves. They fought clean. They fought like gentlemen. They fought like sportsmen, and they tried their best to fight—under rules and conditions that were as new to them as the conditions of the bouts were to the English visitors.

The results of this international match will be far-reaching. It was possible for a team of strangers to come to the United States, to receive a warm welcome, to be cheered and applauded by the crowd for every success. Listening to the roars from the vast crowd in the stands, I heard the same intensity of cheering when a Britisher sm

Steel Demand Is Anticipated For Next Week

In the Meantime, Ingot Capacity May Drop to 30%, Says Iron Age.

By the Associated Press.

New York, July 3.—Sharply curtailed production schedules feature the steel industry this week, due to the holiday, but a substantial demand is looked for next week, said Iron Age today, in its weekly summary.

Ingot output on the eve of the holiday shutdown was 32 per cent of capacity and the average for the period may fall well below 30 per cent, according to the review. In the previous week production was rated at 38 per cent.

"A low operating rate is in line with seasonal expectations," it said. "The summer recession, however, will be less severe and of shorter duration than in 1934, according to prevailing views in the trade.

"The automobile industry, in keeping with its plan to start production of new models in September, will doubtless resume the placing of substantial steel orders in August.

"Agricultural buying power, thanks to ample precipitation, is the best in four years, farm equipment plants remaining active though in a between-season period, while tractor manufacturers are still falling behind in their efforts to catch up with back orders.

"The nascent revival of residential building, the growth of factory construction, the appearance of inquiries from the oil industry for pipe lines and refineries, and finally the increasing diversification of miscellaneous orders for iron and steel also are suggestive that the basis is being laid for a broad business improvement.

"Scrap, always a sensitive barometer, likewise points to early trade improvement. A Youngstown district mill has closed for upward of 50,000 tons of steel-making scrap without developing further price weakness, and at Chicago a consumer purchase has resulted in an advance, raising the Iron Age composite from $10.71 to $10.75 a ton."

Pig iron production in June was 1,552,514 tons or 51,750 tons a day, compared with 1,727,095 tons, or 55,713 tons daily in May.

Chicago Loans Low, Deposits Near Peak

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, July 3.—Loans and discounts of Chicago banks on June 29 were at the lowest point in more than 15 years for which records are available, the statements of 51 national and State banks in the city showed today. On the other hand, total deposits rose to the highest point since late in 1930, while savings deposits were the largest since the close of 1931.

Daily Crude Oil Up 84,000 Bbls.

Increase Over Last Year Attributed Partly to Higher Quota.

By the Associated Press.

Crude oil production in May was reported by the Bureau of Mines today at 82,454,000 barrels, a daily average of 2,659,000. This was an increase of 45,600 barrels over the April average, and a gain of 84,000 over a year ago.

The bureau attributed the increase chiefly to a higher quota and to seasonal factors, with California production rising almost to 500,000 barrels. The Texas daily average increased 11,000 barrels to 1,067,200, all the gain being registered in the east Texas fields.

Crude runs to stills averaged 2,594,000 barrels daily, and stocks of crude declined to 338,559,000 barrels.

Demand for motor fuel totaled 39,089,000 barrels, a daily average of 1,261,000 and a 3 per cent increase over a year ago. Exports rose from 1,467,000 barrels in April to 2,141,000.

Fuel oil demand was reported to have declined, demand for kerosene decreasing from 125,000 in April to 114,000.

Refineries reporting operated at 70 per cent of capacity, compared with 68 per cent in April.

Highlights and Background Of Financial News and Trends

By Carlton A. Shively.

New York, July 3.—Enervated dealings in stocks, bonds and most commodities had the usual explanation of midsummer weather, anticipation of the holiday, and the air of uncertainty that still permeates the markets and the business community. Recovery is with us, employment is expanding, and earnings are slowly rising, say many important observers and business leaders. Markets are inclined to believe it, but this was not a day for doing much shouting. Turnover in stocks was around 700,000 shares and prices were near the best in the last hour on covering that came from disappointed bears. Best grade bonds were firm. Cotton was narrow. September wheat closed an eighth of a cent lower at 87 cents a bushel.

Thoughts in Wall Street were one holiday matters more than on financial problems, but the outlook seemed a shade less clear than it was yesterday. Second thoughts on the public utility bill standing, the new banking bill and the general policies at Washington left doubts as to how much had been gained for the side of reason.

Recent developments are highly encouraging, but principally so for the fact that they show the direction of the wind. It is becoming clearer that strong public support is possible for a sound banking system, regulation of the public utilities without use of capital punishment, and admission that the mere outpouring of billions by the Federal Government is a poor substitute for genuine business activity.

Reform vs. Recovery.

Coming down to the actual position, the adherence to old ideas of the New Deal, stuck closely to reform rather than to recovery, still is strong at Washington. So long as it persists industry can not expect a clear road ahead. It will have to go through its days of doubt. It had to swallow the fact today that the banking bill is not yet through Congress, and that just what sort of public utility regulation, or what system of taxation, will be undertaken is still a matter of guesswork.

Business news was of no great moment. The midweek steel trade reviews were mildly optimistic, and prophesied that the summer period of relaxation would be shorter than it was last year. The annual Motor Show this year comes in the autumn, which is expected to help the steel and automotive trades. Crops are looking far better than a year ago. Retail trade seems to be holding its own.

In stocks the trading was more restricted as to issues involved and the price changes lacked the sensations of yesterday, when bear raiders crushed down two or three issues. The bank group, small enough to cause brokers to wish they could bring over more stocks from the over-counter dealers, was especially active. At the odd-lot post, corn exchange was prominent. Dealings probably were the largest since the listing of the issue and the price rose two points to a new high level for over a year.

Lehman at New High.

Marine Midland also was unusually active and advanced a large fraction. Lehman Corporation touched a new high. Transamerica, on which the dividend was boosted, was raised to around the best price of the year. Bank statements now being published show a considerable rise in deposits, carrying out the trend of the past several months, but earnings were not especially noteworthy, in view of the low state of loans and the depressed interest rates. However, the market feels that a happier period lies ahead for the well-managed banks, particularly with the recession of the central bank menace and the wedge placed in the new capital market through the underwriting amendment to the bank act.

McCrory Stores issues were soft, but Bohn Aluminum recovered more than a point. Motor accessories continued the favorite group, next to the banks. Timken climbed more than a point. Radio shares were a shade lower. Net changes of a point or more in either direction were scarce. Utilities as a group were irregular. Water Works hardened a little. Rails were slightly depressed. Southern gave a little more and Union Pacific was heavy. Rock Island slipped into the penny class for the first time.

New York, July 3 (AP).—The New York Stock Exchange reports members' collateral borrowings at the close of business June 30 amounted to $808,589,298, an increase of $16,048,267, compared with the May 31 total of $792,541,031.

Total face amount of Government securities pledged as collateral for the borrowings included in the above total was $83,902,925 against $71,071,675 last year.

The low point for brokers' loans since the stock exchange started publishing these figures was reached July 31, 1932, when they amounted to $241,599,943, compared with the record high of $8,549,383,979 on September 30, 1929.

Brown Bros., Harriman Deposits Gain 77%

New York, July 3.—The statement of Brown Brothers, Harriman & Co. private bankers, as of June 29, 1935, shows deposits of $39,375,597, an increase of 77 per cent over the figure for deposits reported on June 30, 1934, the date of the first public disclosure of the firm's statement.

The current statement also reveals increases in total assets, deposits and surplus as compared with the March 30 statement. In the three months period, total assets increased from $57,240,344 to $64,703,609. Deposits of $39,375,597 on June 29 compare with $33,343,109 on March 30. Surplus rose from $8,550,768 to $8,675,455 in the same period.

Guaranty's Deposits Are $1,268,883,103

New York, July 3 (AP).—The statement of condition of the Guaranty Trust Co., issued today, as of June 30, shows deposits of $1,412,601,413, largest in the history of the company, which compares with deposits of $1,268,883,104 on March 31, and $1,203,475,411 a year ago.

Total resources as of June 30 were $1,730,209,418 against $1,581,795,947 three months ago and $1,539,221,442 a year ago.

D. C. Building Leads Entire Fifth District

Aggregate of $2,611,585 Is Double That of Same 1934 Month.

By R. Karl von Lewinski.

New building construction in Washington licensed during May aggregated $2,611,585, to lead all cities in the Fifth Federal Reserve District, the Richmond Reserve Bank reported yesterday. The Fifth District includes the States of Virginia, West Virginia, North and South Carolina and Maryland besides the District.

More than twice as great as the total reported by the second-place city, Baltimore, during the month, local permits were three times greater than during the same 1934 month. Cumberland placed third with $625,083 of planned construction, while Durham, N. C., placed next with an aggregate of $201,963. Richmond lagged in the month and turned in a total of $174,942.

Building permits issued in 31 leading Fifth District cities in May numbered 2,892, compared with 2,223 permits issued in May, 1934, an increase of 30.1 per cent. Estimated valuation figures for all classes of permits issued totaled $5,851,857, compared with $2,606,967 valuation for permits issued in May, 1934, an increase this year of 124.5 per cent Twenty-six of the 31 cities showed higher valuation figures for May, 1935, than for May, 1934, most of the improvement being in residential construction.

Retail Trade Ahead.

Retail trade of Washington stores continued to forge ahead, during the month scoring the only gains in the entire Reserve District, as compared with the same 1934 month.

Sales in the local stores were 8.7 per cent of the same month of 1934, while in Baltimore they lagged 6.6 per cent behind. In Richmond sales were off 1.7 per cent, while in all other cities they were off 7-10 of 1 per cent.

In the first five months of the year local stores also stood in first place. Against an average gain in the whole District of 6.1 per cent, the Washington retail outlets increased sales by 12.6 per cent.

The amount of stock in local stores decreased 1.7 per cent in the month, while both Baltimore and Richmond stocks were higher on the last day of May than on the last of April.

In the percentage of May receivable collected during May Washington lagged behind Richmond, but was substantially higher than other neighboring cities.

Passenger Fare Reduction.

Eastern railroad circles are again considering reduction of passenger rates, it was learned yesterday. Lately there has been continual pressure exerted to reduce the basic rate of 3.6 cents per mile.

On July 1 the Bangor & Aroostook reduced fares to 2 cents a mile. Intrastate fares in and out of Boston have been cut by the New Haven, and the Fonda, Johnstown & Gloversville on July 15 will begin a three-month experiment with a 1-cent rate.

It is understood that both the Baltimore & Ohio and the Pennsylvania are in favor of an early reduction, but that the New York Central, which is under the same regulations, is unfavorable.

All Markets and Banks Closed.

All financial districts of the Nation will observe Independence Day today. All banks, the New York Stock Exchange and Curb Exchange as well as leading commodity marts will be closed. Also the Chicago Board of Trade and the Washington Stock Exchange.

Utility and Oil Shares Lead Curb

By the Associated Press.

New York, July 3.—Curb market stocks were left to shift for themselves throughout the forenoon today, but preholiday apathy gave way to a spurt of activity in oils and utilities during the final hour of trading which enabled most shares to end fractionally higher.

A number of leaders were able to convert forenoon losses into gains when sentiment underwent a change and a moderate amount of short covering was forced among the more volatile stocks. Prominent shares ending higher included American Gas, Aluminum Co., Electric Bond & Share, Humble Oil, International Petroleum, Creole Petroleum, Lake Shore Mines, Cities Service, Niagara Hudson, Pioneer Gold and Gulf Oil.

Head Is Chosen By Reorganized Veterans' Board

New Maryland Commission Is Sworn in by Gov. Nice.

By the Associated Press.

Baltimore, July 3.—The reorganized Maryland Veterans Commission was sworn in by Gov. Harry W. Nice today. Thomas B. R. Mudd, of Charles County, was named chairman at $3,000 a year.

Other commission members, who serve without pay, are William F. Lehnert, jr., George M. Tucker and Paul A. Dehoff, all of Baltimore, and Walter E. Quenstedt, retiring Mayor of Annapolis.

As soon as the commission members had received their oath of office they left the Governor and held an executive meeting in an office on another floor of the Union Trust Building. In this meeting they named John McNulty, commander of the Maryland Department of the American Legion, executive secretary and State service office at a salary of $2,500 annually.

Also appointed were four assistant State service officers at salaries of $1,900 a year. They are Wellington Yutzy, Garrett County; Thomas B. Edwards, Wicomico County, Edgar C. Hobbs, Baltimore County, and J. H. Harwood, Harford County. These men will represent veterans in the four sections of the State.

The last legislative session appropriated $75,000 for each of the 1935 and 1936 biennium for veteran relief, and an additional $20,000 for administration. The Governor asserted the full relief fund will be used, and as much of the $20,000 as is required.

The commission will immediately relieve Maj. Gen. Milton A. Reckord, chairman pro tem of the veterans commission, of all duties in connection with the office, said Gov. Nice.

Alleged Threats Jail Jersey Man

Lyman Wolff Sent to Gallinger for Observation.

Alleged threats on the life of William J. Rowan, Washington attorney, yesterday sent Lyman H. Wolff, of West Englewood, N. J., to Gallinger Hospital for observation when he was arraigned before Police Court Judge Robert Mattingly.

Wolff, it was testified, appeared Tuesday at Rowan's office in the Woodward Building after telephoning an announcement of his visit. A few heated words were exchanged and Wolff reputedly threatened to cut the attorney's throat.

Forewarned by the telephone call, however, Rowan had sent an elevator boy for a policeman. Wolff was arrested a few minutes after he arrived.

SHIFTING of duties at FHA has resulted in the merging of the much-discussed Public Relations Division under deputy administrator, Title 1, headed by Arthur Walsh.

Under the new setup, the public relations work is handled through units known as educational material, titles 1, 2, 3; radio and motion pictures and division of information, the latter under the direction of Paul Fitzpatrick. Mr. Fitzpatrick and Ward M. Canaday were officials of the Public Relations Division. Mr. Canaday is now an assistant to the administrator.

The old Public Relations Division had been under fire for some time. At a hearing of the House Civil Service Committee, relative to the Sirovich bill, this division was criticized severely.

A new chart outlining the new organization has been issued at Federal Housing Administration.

Sixty groups of industrial and commercial employes and other groups obtained charters for Federal Credit Unions during June, according to a statement from the Farm Credit Administration. A total of 425 of these new thrift and loan associations have been chartered since the Federal Credit Union act was passed last year.

Agriculture School Closes.

With the completion of 49 courses, attended by employes from the various branches of the Government, the graduate school of the Department of Agriculture has closed the 1934-35 school year.

The registration mounted to 1,514 students, nearly three times as many as any previous year. Of the 19 new courses given, "personnel administration" was the most popular, with 765 students. Of the total registration, 708 were from the Department of Agriculture and 806 from other Government agencies.

The preliminary announcement for 1935-36 follows:

"Full information may be obtained from the Director of the Graduate School, Dr. A. F. Woods, 4090 South Building, Department of Agriculture. The preliminary announcement is being sent to all Government departments and the final announcement will be available through the chief clerks of the various departments or by application to the director."

H. Grady Nail, Estate Tax Division, is visiting relatives in Alabama.

Letters Left Over.

The circular letter which caused 300 additional clerks to be taken on at FHA to answer extra correspondence has led to a rather peculiar development.

An announcement from FHA contains the following statement:

"Reports have been received that postmasters in certain States ordered more letters than there were householders in the city, with the result that they have a supply of letters left over.

"Postmasters in such cases are being requested to send the oversupply to the State or district office of the Federal Housing Administration, where, if there is no other use for the letters, they will be destroyed or converted to scratch paper."

It has been reported that approximately 85,000 letters were sent out. The 300 extra workers are said to have cleaned up the huge resulting correspondence in about two weeks.

C. K. Mansuy, Estate Tax Division, has been visiting at Point Lookout, Md.

Hard-of-Hearing Group Adopts a New Name

Name of the organization formerly known as the American Federation of Organizations for the Hard of Hearing has been officially changed, the society's headquarters in New York announced yesterday. The new name, the American Society for the Hard of Hearing, was formally approved by New York State authorities, under whose jurisdiction the organizations first were incorporated.

The purpose of the society is the prevention of deafness, the conservation of hearing and the rehabilitation of adults with failing ears.

Albert W. Tucker, of Washington, is treasurer of the national organization, and Miss Florence P. Spofford, also of this city, is vice president of the South Atlantic zone.

Underleading a King.

Once years ago students of Contract Bridge used to be told never to lead away from a King. Expert players eventually came to realize that the lead of a low card from the suit headed by the King is not so bad as they once thought and now such a lead is preferred to the underlead of an unsupported Queen or Jack. This proves how wrong accepted standards of the game of Contract Bridge may sometimes turn out to be.

Exception.

No one has yet come along to disprove the obvious fact that the King itself, when not accompanied by either the Queen or the Ace, should not be led. Yet even this apparent Bridge axiom sometimes has its exceptions. In the deal below I saw one of these exceptions developed in a very forcible manner.

1—Originally with a six and a four-card suit it is proper to bid the long suit a second time before showing the shorter suit. South properly varies the procedure in this case to show that he has a strong hand. His hand is not quite good enough to bid three spades but he fears that a simple rebid of two spades will not adequately express his strength. The three diamond bid, since it raises the contract to the nine-trick level, shows that South has a strong hand and encourages North to rebid.

4—Actually North has shown all his strength but with adequate support for the rebid spade suit he is willing to gamble for a game.

The Play.

West opened the King of diamonds and South won with the Ace. Wishing to establish a heart trick before the opponents could shift to clubs, South's next lead was a heart and he won dummy's Ace, leading back the Queen. East covered and South ruffed, the Jack of hearts now being established. Next South led a low diamond, preparing to ruff his diamond losers in dummy. Upon winning this diamond trick West was in a predicament. If he failed to lead spades South would be able to ruff both of his losing diamonds. If West led a low spade, dummy's Queen would win the trick, and while South could ruff only one diamond loser he would have avoided the loss of a trump trick.

West adequately solved the problem by laying down the King of spades. This seemingly unnatural play protected the setting trick for East and West. South won with the spade Ace, but now if South wished to ruff a diamond he would have to use the high trump and later lose an extra spade trick. And if South used the Queen of spades to draw a round of trumps, he would eventually be forced to lost two more tricks in diamonds. In either of these cases South would lose four tricks and with them his contract.

You don't associate charm or beauty with a bank . . . Yet one of the most charming colonial buildings in the city is the Sixty-fourth and Madison avenue branch of the Bank of the Manhattan Co. . . . You almost expect to see George Washington and Martha Custis as depositors . . . Brooklyn readers are irked by the assertion that Ben Marden's Riviera gives you the most beguiling view . . . They maintain that the Bossert Marine Roof, in Brooklyn, with a view of New York Bay for the asking, is Tops . . . I'll have to check on this and make fuller report . . . George Arliss is the only one who can wear a monocle and look right . . . Ivan Lebedeff wears one, but gingerly . . . Nicest luncheon spot is the New York A. C. dining room, 11 floors up and overlooking Central Park . . . Dolores Del Rio's legs, in "In Caliente," were black and blue in the bathing close-ups.

Bookmakers at New York tracks need headache powders, and new bank rolls . . . Favorites have been winning regularly at Aqueduct, with newspaper selectors picking five and six winners a day . . . The bookies are bankrupt . . . Col. Jack Sarnoff, right-hand man of I. J. Fox, came back from Europe with his wallet emaciated . . . A day later, he received a check for 1,700 fraancs from the Ritz Hotel in Paris . . . They had overcharged him . . . He was as happy as a sweepstake winner . . . Minna Wallis will greet Myrna Loy at the gangplank . . . Jim Dooling, Tammany leader, losing weight, is putting it on again with the same Builder-Upper that Block and Sully, Ethel Shutta and Ruth Etting recommend . . . The Frank Wildes (she was Audrey Watts) are excited over a baby girl . . . Westchester is excited over the fall nuptials of Carol Ward and Price Berrian . . . Her dad is Evans Ward, her granddad was the late W. L. Ward, G. O. P. chieftain.

On the Air Today

The networks were active last month in corralling a variety of special Independence Day broadcasts. In traditional style, the Fourth will be observed with considerable oratory.

To most of us, radio remains the marvel of the age (when we forget to be blase about it). Today's special programs demonstrate this, for broadcasts will originate in all parts of the country.

Special Independence Day features are set off to themselves in an adjoining column.

Last Saturday morning we sat in on the judging of amateur winners in Arthur Godfrey's recent talent search. Robert McDonald, 2800 Ontario road northwest, won thumbs down, as it were. The reward was $150 and a week at the Fox, or the equivalent of $150 pay for a week's stage work. Imagine our surprise when it was announced in the "Judging the Stars" show Monday night that the winner also would be presented on the Fox stage, but would get $200 in cash. Personally, we'd rather have the "Judging the Stars" gentleman do the bargaining for us on our stage appearances.

All through the Pacemakers broadcast Tuesday night (WRC) we kept wondering whether Phil Lampkin does those pit calisthenics when he directs in the studio . . . will have to drop in some night and see the show . . . Liked Godfrey's dialect man in the Gazette . . . And definitely decided that the international songstress, introduced by Lud Gluskin in his new Columbia show, has been over-ballyhooed.

Average $692 a Year, Virginia Teachers Say

By the Associated Press.

Richmond, Va., July 3.—Better pay for teachers was prescribed today by the public relations committee of the Virginia Education Association as a remedy for what the group termed the fundamental defect in Virginia's public schools—"constant changing or turnover."

The committee said figures for 1933-34 showed 33 per cent of the principals were being paid less than $1,200.

The average pay of all Virginia teachers during the past year was less than the average yearly earnings of unskilled laborers, the committee asserted; quoting $692 as the average pay for all instructors in the State as compared with $700 for unskilled workers.

Strange as It Seems —By John Hix

AN open window without a screen—a livery stable near at hand—the wearing of silk stockings and knee breeches by men—the heat of a midsummer day in the old Philadelphia State House—

Upon such things as these the signing of the American Declaration of Independence depended in 1776. Strange as it seems, the signing of the declaration was greatly hastened, if not actually brought about, by the fact that horseflies annoyed signers so much that they stopped their endless arguing over the declaration and signed it.

When the delegates gathered to consider the declaration that Thomas Jefferson had written, first thing they did was start to pick it to pieces. They objected to one thing and another in the wording, almost each man with his own ideas of how the declaration should be written in its final form. One delegate, Benjamin Harrison, went so far as to say that the only thing he liked about the manuscript was the word "Congress."

The more they argued the less they agreed. July weather was hot in Philadelphia that summer, and near the old state house was a livery stable with its myriads of horseflies. Somebody opened a window, the flies came in droves, they bit the delegates' silk clad legs.

News from Mr. Twitchell, Alaskan Pioneer.

Mr. Franklin D. Roosevelt,
Washington, D. C.

My dear President:

Here I am in Alaska on that pioneer movement of yours, and will you please come and get me at once? The hardships up here are terrific. Why, Mr. Roosevelt, the Government has not sent us any radio sets or wire for outside aerials!

• • • •

Now, Mr. Roosevelt, we modern American pioneers can stand a lot of hardships, but you can't expect us to sit around a whole evening completely cut off from WEAF. When we left America to start a New Deal colony up here we expected a few privations, but we didn't think things would go that far.

• • • •

There has also been a serious misunderstanding here about the duties of pioneers with regard to house building and road clearing. It seems the pioneers think they should be paid by the Government for building their own cabins, for example, and quite a bunch of pioneers went on strike a few days ago, insisting that if they pioneer they do it at so much a day.

• • • •

They named me their walking delegate. This is why I am writing you. I think the idea of asking a pioneer to pioneer without regular wages is an outrage, and as for me, I will not chop down a single tree unless I get paid for it.

• • • •

I think the way Washington has handled this pioneering is a disgrace. No roads were laid out when we reached the wilderness, there were no gasoline stations anywhere, and the very first day here we lost three pioneers who perished looking for an all-hot stand.

• • • •

What is the idea, Mr. Roosevelt? Are you trying to make pioneering hard for pioneers? Yours in distress,

ELMER TWITCHELL.

The Changing Times.

The Government will bury its gold in an enormous hole at Fort Knox, Ky., the former feeling against gold hoarders having evidently disappeared.

Inquest Frees Wife in Slaying Of Husband

Justifiable Verdict Given After Pitiful Tale of Marital Woes.

After listening to a pitiful story of marital strife, maltreatment and privation, a coroner's jury yesterday agreed that Mrs. Esther E. Patterson, 35, slim, dark-haired mother, was justified in stabbing to death her estranged husband, Frank B. Patterson, 40, former Marine, when he attempted to force entrance to her home in the 300 block of H street northeast, Tuesday night.

In tones hardly audible to those who sat in the District Morgue inquest room, Mrs. Patterson told how her husband, apparently in a drunken rage, came to her home and demanded to see their eldest daughter, Gertrude, 15. She told how, in panic, she seized a small paring knife and plunged it into Patterson's chest when he started to batter down the front door.

Recounts Marital Strife.

Then she told of earlier years in her married life—16 of them. She told of repeated beatings at the hands of her husband. She told of separations and reconciliations. She told of bearing the brunt of labor and support of her four children. It took the jury less than 15 minutes to return a verdict of justifiable homicide.

Gertrude left her father's home in the 200 block of F street northwest to live with her mother. Tuesday night Patterson went to the H street house and demanded that the child return with him. She refused. Then, according to reports, he became abusive and threatened to break his way in and get her.

Mrs. Patterson, fearful of her life, but determined to protect her daughter, stood just inside the front door. Her husband started to beat against the wooden panels. In desperation, she procured a paring knife from the kitchen and returned just as Paaterson drove his fist through the door.

Blade Punctures Chest.

As he reached inside to turn the lock, Mrs. Patterson lunged with the knife. The blade punctured Patterson's chest.

Several days ago, Mrs. Patterson appeared in the assistant district attorney's office at Police Court and swore out a warrant for her husband, charging him with assault. She claimed he struck her.

Culbertson Sued By the 'Four Aces'

Damages and Injunction Asked on 'Attack.'

By the Associated Press.

New York, July 3.—Ely Culbertson was sued today by "The Four Aces" in the State Supreme Court. David T. Burnstine, Michael T. Gottlieb, Oswald Jacoby and Howard Schenken brought an action seeking damages and an injunction restraining Culbertson, his associate editor, Richard L. Frey, formerly one of the "Aces," and Culbertson's magazine, the Bridge World, from attacking them.

The complaint says the defendants published statements to the effect that the plaintiffs have no system of their own, are not the best bridge players in the world, and do not employ their system in tournaments.

The defendants wrongfully maintain, the complaint continues, that Culbertson's system is the best and that he and his team are the best bridge players in the world. Another cause of action cited is that the defendants attribute the plaintiffs' success to Frey, who was a substitute on their team.

Culbertson issued the following statement about the suit: "It is a shame that the Supreme Court is being used for such an obvious psychic bid for publicity. I suggest the four jokers try suing me for alienation. They might win."

Irene Blair Dies in Hospital Day After Disappearing.

By the Associated Press.

New York, July 3.—Mary Cunningham, 24-year-old actress, who disappeared June 13, died the next day in Bellevue hospital, it was disclosed today when her mother identified her body at the morgue.

On the stage she had been known as Irene Blair and had played in several Broadway successes, including "Street Scene," "The Breadwinners," "The Curtain Rises" and "Nowadays."

Gov. Nice to Ship Muskrat, Terrapin (of Course You Knew) to Smith.

By the Associated Press.

Baltimore, July 3.—Al Smith's request for native Maryland animals for the Prospect Park Zoo, in New York, has met with success. Gov. Harry W. Nice is having one fiber zibethicus and one malaclemys palustris sent him.

The Governor wrote to Smith today and at the same time communicated wtih Dr. R. V. Truitt, director of the Chesapeake Biological Laboratory. Truitt made the offer to the Govenor.

The Maryland executive expressed some concern to Dr. Truitt over the fact that the scientists had dignified the muskrat with the name "Fiber Zibethicus" and the Maryland terrapin with the unpronounceable "Malaclemys palustris."

He expressed the fear that such terminology applied to these Maryland natives "will interfere with their natural beauty, obstruct their proverbial industry and altogether destroy the romance in which we poor laymen have been accustomed to revel."

"It may be that Mr. Smith, in a moment of mental aberration, will be able to comprehend the importance of these products of our native land and water," the Governor told Dr. Truitt. "I shall hasten to advise him of your generous offer to deliver such animals to him safe, sound, sane and alive, but hamstrung by your unspeakable and unpronounceable designations."

Navy Sends Aid To U. S. Settlers In Alaska Area

Official Buys Supplies at Seattle and Prepares to Join Pioneers.

By the Associated Press.

Seattle, July 3.—Capt. Charles E. Parsons, the Navy's contribution to the Matansuka project, rushed relief measures here today for the modern pioneers whose complaints from the Alaskan Valley stirred comment in the United States Senate.

The captain, arriving here Tuesday night from Mare Island Navy Yard, Calif., at once conferred with Federal relief officials and then directed his attention to buying materials and to employing men in preparation for their departure Saturday for Seward.

He lost no time in seeking two portable sawmills, portable well diggers, lumber and other equipment for the colony.

Eugene Carr, FERA representative, assigned to take over the project's administration recently, is in charge at Matanuska. Whether Parsons will supersede him in directing the colonies' affairs or whether they will work together was not revealed in the captain's orders.

By the Associated Press.

Pittsburgh, July 3.—Richard Crist, a promising young artist with a determination to do some painting in Mexico, offered shares in his talent to the public today at $5 each.

"Stockholders" receives a business-like share in Richard Crist, Inc., acknowledging the money has been received for the purpose of "financing the journey of Richard Crist, artist, through Old Mexico."

Upon Crist's return the stockholders may select one of his oil or water-color paintings.

Several years ago the 24-year-old painter won the American traveling scholarship of the Art Institute of Chicago and went to Mexico, paying his hotel bill by painting a landscape for the proprietor. He estimates about $150 will finance his present trip.

Shortly after the "shares" went on sale Crist announced several purchasers.

Coughlin Holds Chicago Board Abuses Power

Files Amended Demand Use of Soldier Field Be Given Him.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, July 3.—An amended petition in behalf of the Rev. Charle E. Coughlin's suit for a writ of manadmus to compel the Chicago Park District to grant him the use of Soldier Field for a meeting of his National Union for Social Justice, was filed in the superior court today.

It recounted the charges made in the earlier bill and in addition charged the park board with abuse of its powers in letting the huge field and stadium.

It also set forth that Father Coughlin, Detroit radio priest, is willing to pay the usual fees for the use of the field, reported to be 15 per cent of the gross receipts derived from the sale of admission tickets.

The amended petition was filed by Attorney Samuel A. Ettelson, representing the priest, at the instruction of Judge James J. Kelly, who previously overruled the demurrer of the park district to the suit.

The case is scheduled for hearing Friday before Judge Kelly.

Harrisonburg Council Setup Is Reorganized

Nine Departments Headed by City Councilmen Are Established.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Harrisonburg, Va., July 3.—Reorganization of the Harrisonburg city government into nine departments, each headed by a city councilman as director, was approved last night by the city council after one year's study.

Mayor Ward Swank and city councilmen believe the new setup embodies the best features of the councilmanic, commission and city manager forms of government.

The departments are finance, streets and sidewalks, electric light and power, water and sewers, law enforcement and public safety, public welfare and charity, health and sanitation, fire and safety, and real estate and parks.

John F. Noll, veteran superintendent of public works, is designated as superintendent of the electric and power division and a technical assistant will be named. City Engineer William G. Myers will head the water and sewers department.

Three new departments, previously handled under the old council committees, are established. These are public welfare and charity, health and sanitation and real estate and parks. Previously, the welfare work was under the supervision of the board of public welfare, with the city providing the funds. The council will name the superintendent.

. . . what SORT of men?

WE LIKE your smile, youngster . . .

IT'S heart-warming and jolly and bright and sincere. And it's your most valuable asset.

YOU KNOW that already? We're not surprised. Selling newspapers isn't the easiest job in the world. Young chaps who do the selling must have their best points lined up at their finger tips . . . and be able to display them advantageously at just the right moment. Curiously enough, after they've explained The Post's advantages over other newspapers, it's the sunshine of a smile that puts the customer's name on the dotted line. As long as that smile lasts, so does the customer.

SIMPLE ENOUGH . . . yet it's one secret of success that many men never learn. You're lucky to have discovered the magic of a smile when you're just starting out. It's the very core of courtesy . . . and courtesy helps sell newspapers . . . sell you!

WE KNOW that at times it's not easy. It's no fun to jump out of a warm, cozy bed into a cold room before a winter dawn, for instance . . . or to slosh about in wet weather, delivering your papers, with only a dog for company . . . it's no fun at all.

WE APPLAUD you, then, for your broad grin and cheerful countenance. Just remember to keep smiling. It will make the going easier, now and always.
